Canadian police are checking fresh reports that Canadian arms have been shipped to South Africa in defiance of a United Nations arms embargo.

But a South African defence spokesman in Pretoria said reports of arms shipments are mere speculation.

The question of whether South Africa has been getting arms from Canada and other Western countries, despite official embargoes against such shipments, developed from a report in The Times of London and a BBC television program, Panorama, that South Africa got at least 40,000 special long-range 155-millimetre shells and guns, radar and other equipment.

These London reports Monday said the arms were shipped by a U.S. company called Space Research Corp., located in North Troy, Vt., at the Canadian border.

However, the CBC program, The Fifth Estate, to be aired tonight, said the company involved was Space Research Corp. of Highwater, Que., which has been shipping 155-millimetre artillery shells to a test site on the Caribbean island of Antigua. The CBC television program claims the shells were reshipped from Antigua to South Africa.

A Space Research Corp. spokesman said today his firm shipped 12,988 inert 155-mm. artillery shell casings to Spain last July. Whether they were used in Spain or elsewhere is beyond the control of the company, the spokesman said.

But E.S. Affleck of the legal firm of Fasken and Calvin, which has been retained by Space Research, denied arms or military equipment were shipped to South Africa.

Space Research has been testing a new long-range artillery system on Antigua. Affleck said there is a good chance that the prototype may be accepted by NATO within a year to provide a gun system far superior than the one currently used by the Soviet Union and the Warsaw bloc.

Current models in both the East and West fire a distance of about 23 to 30 kilometres. The Space Research model would fire about 40 km.

Affleck said that if the prototype is accepted by NATO, there would be a huge contract for Canada providing about 3,000 jobs in Quebec and other Canadian areas.

The CBC program says that the shells shipped to Antigua were in some cases trans-shipped to South Africa. It also alleges that a Canadian shipment of about 21,000 inert shells to Spain last year ended up in South Africa as well.

Affleck said the shipment to Spain last year was a legal export with the Spanish government anxious to improve the country's military.

The CBC program says shipments overseas last year were mainly aboard S.A. Tugelaland, a ship registered in West Germany but owned by a South African firm.

WHITES ATTACKED

Witnesses said angry groups tried to haul three whites from a police car after their detention outside a post office.

Four other whites — two of them on a motorcycle — were also attacked in the street.

No details were available on whether they were injured.

Troops on Lusaka's main street, Cairo Road, tried to contain the crowds of about 200 and police also helped to push them back, the witnesses said.

Lusaka has been alive with rumors about white spies in the capital since the attacks began.

The attacks on whites appear to have started Monday night when police arrested two South Africans for their protection as a mob gathered round them, witnesses said.

Jobless: Lowest Level In year

OTTAWA (CP) — Unemployment dropped to its lowest level since August, 1977, last month, with the seasonally-adjusted jobless rate at 8.2 per cent, Statistics Canada reported today.

However, in B.C. the rate rose to 8.2 per cent from 8.1 per cent a month earlier. Nova Scotia was the only other province where the employment situation worsened.

In Victoria, Labor Minister Allan Williams said today he is not concerned about the latest increase.

"It would startle me except I also find, on analysis, the same result was experienced in 1977 between the months of September and October," he said. "It would appear therefore to be an increase of a seasonal nature."

Williams said he expects the unemployment rate will drop within the next few months.

"I think the fact that we have, in the past year, increased the number of employed persons by 54,000 is an indication that the activities of government and the encouragement which has been given to the private sector is working, and we'll continue to do that," he said.

The federal agency said there were 798,000 Canadians without jobs in October and the unemployment rate before adjustments are made to take into account seasonal changes in the work force was 7.2 per cent.

In September, the seasonally-adjusted rate, which reflects trends in the labor force, stood at 8.5 per cent. The actual number of unemployed then was 854,000.

There were 10,282,000 persons with jobs last month, compared with 9,920,000 a

Higher Rates Forecast

TORONTO (CP) — Interest rates in Canada and the United States are expected to rise higher yet, says a former U.S. state department official and consultant to the World Bank.

"The recent increases are only a belated over-reaction to things that have been going on for a decade and a half — the cost of the Vietnam war, higher oil prices, and the breakdown of the fixed exchange rate system," said Miklos Szabo-Pelsoczi, senior adviser with Bache Halsey Stuart Shields Inc. of New York.

The Canadian bank rate, which was 7.5 per cent at the beginning of the year, has been raised six times in the last eight months, reaching a record 10.75 per cent.

The U.S. discount rate has been increased seven times since the beginning of the year, to a record 9.5 per cent from six per cent.

Szabo-Pelsoczi said the U.S. has an accumulated deficit of about $120 billion. But the build-up of U.S. dollar deposits in Europe and Japan is compounded by the multiplier effect of foreign bank credit creation puts the total outstanding deficit closer to $500 billion, he said.

"This wild-west style of banking has resulted in additional money creation which is not under the direct control of any government."

Finance Minister Jean Chretien admitted Monday in Ottawa that the latest increase in the trend-setting Bank of Canada interest rate will pose "short-term economic inconveniences" for the country.

But Chretien, under fire in the Commons from opposition critics who charged the increase will further weaken an already-sluggish economy, said he hoped rates will come down once the Canadian and U.S. dollars stabilize.

The finance minister also said he hopes to announce the date of a budget either today or Wednesday.

Also in Ottawa Monday, Gerald Bouey, governor of the central bank said the Bank of Canada knew there

Drunken Drivers On Tape

Attorney - General Garde Gardom said Monday the use of videotape as evidence against impaired drivers may become mandatory throughout B.C.

Vernon RCMP have been video-taping persons charged with impaired driving and last week a court allowed the tape to be used as evidence.

Gardom said the experimental program has been successful and police need all the tools available to them to combat the drinking-driving problem.

The attorney-general said he will review the Vernon court case before making a final decision.

170 Hurt On Ferry

NEW YORK (AP) — At least 170 persons were reported injured today when a Staten Island ferry crashed against a concrete seawall at the lower tip of Manhattan as it tried to dock in heavy fog.

Authorities said the ferry, crowded with about 2,000 passengers and crew, was never in danger of sinking.

About two metres of the steel deck peeled back and passengers were thrown about like rag dolls. "It looked like it was opened by a giant can opener," said one passenger.

Police said at least 30 of those aboard suffered serious injuries and 140 others were said to have suffered bruises and cuts in the crash off Battery Park about 7:30 a.m.

There were broken arms, broken legs and lacerated faces from broken glass.

Vantreight Admits Sons Built Without a Permit

By PAUL MOSS
Times Staff

The chairman of Saanich council's bylaw enforcement committee admitted Monday night his sons illegally built drainage facilities on municipal property.

But Ald. Geoff Vantreight defended what had been done by telling fellow aldermen farmers must "make hay when the sun shines."

"Accordingly, it was necessary that my sons proceed to dig the ditches and build the drainage basin (on Panama Flats) before ironing out all of the essential details of their proposed potato farming scheme," Vantreight said in a letter to council.

Among the essential details was the basic step of obtaining the municipality's permission to use its land and carry out the drainage work, which included construction of a concrete basin 50 feet long by 35 feet wide.

The transgression was brought to the Saanich administration's attention last Friday and referred to council for a discussion which clearly proved embarrassing to several aldermen.

It was eventually decided to refer the whole matter to the public works committee and ask for a more detailed staff report.

The Vantreights recently leased Panama Flats acreage from William Edge of Carey Road. They are now exercising an option to buy the property, which is adjacent to municipally-owned land.

Outside the council chamber Monday night Ian Vantreight said in answer to a reporter's question that there was no confusion over the unmarked boundary line between the two properties.

"Time was of the essence to make that land work," he said.

"To go through the channels one has to, might have taken a little bit too long."

Ald. Vantreight said in his letter that because a viable potato-growing operation needs 120 to 140 frost-free days, his sons sought an urgent solution to the Panama Flats flooding problem to ensure they could use the land early in April.

Since drainage was essential and the area had been designated for farming they assumed the necessary municipal approval would be forthcoming.

"Perhaps their enthusiasm and haste were premature," he added.

During the council debate Ald. John Mika asked for clarification of a discrepancy between the letters from municipal administrator William Tremayne and Ald. Vantreight.

He said the former referred to the work as having been done by Vantreight and Sons while the alderman's letter referred only to his sons.

"Is there some other company that has done work here?" Mika inquired.

Ian Vantreight said there is no such corporate entity as G.A. Vantreight and Sons, which is merely a name on the side of a truck. He said the farming operation is run

MYSTERY ILLNESS HITS ELTON JOHN

LONDON (UPI) — Rock star Elton John was rushed to a private London clinic Tuesday suffering from what his record company described as a "mystery illness."

A spokesman for Rocket Records emphatically denied newspaper reports the 31-year-old singer had suffered a heart attack.

"That is just not true," she said. "He has a mystery illness and tests are being carried out now. He played football on Sunday and as far as we know he was in good health."

John had been due to fly to Paris Tuesday for a checkup on his much publicized hair transplant. He reportedly collapsed at his home in Buckinghamshire, just northwest of London, and was rushed to the Harley Street Clinic by ambulance about midday.

Iran Still in Turmoil

Times News Services

TEHRAN — The former director of Iran's national airline died of gunshot wounds in a Tehran hospital today and there were conflicting reports whether he committed suicide or was assassinated.

Retired air force Gen. Ali Mohammed Khademi was shot Sunday outside his home in a Tehran suburb. Government officials said they believed the wound was self-inflicted, but a member of the general's family said he was attacked by a gang of youths.

Khademi had been accused of accepting sums of money on aircraft purchases.

Scattered opposition to Shah Mohammed Reza Pahlavi's military government, meanwhile, continued to rock the country.

Sporadic shooting broke out in southern parts of the capital and unconfirmed reports from the provinces also said troops opened fire in several cities in a bid to stem rioting.

In Tehran, a major fire destroyed the national Iranian Gas Co. offices.

No reports of casualties were immediately available.

On the political front, Iran's two-day-old military government began a crackdown against the shah's opponents and former top government officials by reimposing newspaper censorship and arresting political activists. The crackdown also apparently involved breaking up an airlines strike.

All publications except the pro-government newspaper Rastakhiz were shut down as news staffs of other papers resisted renewed censorship and voluntarily suspended publication.

The former government officials, including several governors general who were arrested in the new crackdown, had been accused of corruption and gross abuse of authority, unofficial reports said. Civilian authorities de-

ARNPRIOR, Ont. (CP) — Robert Stewart, 61, mayor of Ladysmith, was killed Monday when he was hit by a truck while he was crossing a street, police said today. Stewart, who was studying at the Federal Study Centre, is survived by his wife and family in Ladysmith.

Rains Ease as Disaster Declared

Heavy rains Monday had grounded helicopter relief flights to outlying communities and hampered work on highways washed out by two days of flooding last week.

However, the rain stopped this morning and the Terrace weather office was predicting only a few scattered showers today.

More than 315 millimetres — 12 inches — have fallen in the area during the past week.

Deputy Premier Grace McCarthy said Monday night the provincial cabinet had agreed to use the government's major disaster fund, which provides financial assistance to those hurt by the flood.

The disaster declaration by the provincial government came in the wake of floods which have caused millions of dollars in damage to homes, roads and bridges.

The cabinet is also expecting the federal government to respond today to a provincial request for financial aid to assist flood victims.

"We want to make it clear that we will use all of the resources of the provincial administration, and we will call on the federal government as well, to help the people who are under such strain and worry and concern," Mrs. McCarthy said.

All provincial ministries will be involved in developing priority measures to ensure that service and transportation are established, she said.

The minister reiterated government promises that assistance will be available to those who suffered personal property losses.

She said a formula for awarding aid will be set when the waters subside and assessment teams are sent in to assist people with claims.

Highways Minister Alex Fraser, the minister responsible for the cleanup, said it is too early to assess the final damage.

However, he said damage to roads and bridges totals more than $10 million and the figure is going up every hour.

Rain and poor visibility had grounded helicopter relief flights to outlying communities, hampered road repair work and caused washouts which led to the closure of Highway 25 between Kitimat and Terrace.

More than 150 men and 100 pieces of equipment were mobilized during the weekend in one of the largest highway reconstruction projects in the province's history.

Highways ministry spokesman Mike O'Connor said Highway 16, which runs west toward Prince George, could be open to single-lane traffic this week, but it could be at least 12 months before the

A STRIKE AGAINST A STRIKE

NELSON (CP) — More than 350 elementary and junior secondary students boycotted classes Monday at two schools near this this southeastern British Columbia community to try to pressure the local school board and the Canadian Union of Public Employees to resume negotiations.

Schools here, along with those in nearby Castlegar, Trail and Grand Forks, plus Selkirk College, have been operating on a reduced basis since Oct. 26 when some non-teaching employees walked off the job and others were locked out.

Meanwhile, more than 50 parents rallied outside the Castlegar school board office, and demanded that negotiations resume. They said they won't allow their children to attend school until progress is made.

In Coquitlam, meanwhile, there were no suspensions Monday at Winslow junior secondary school after students walked out briefly Friday to press demands for a four-day week.

Naga Terada, a vice-principal at the school, said: "Things are running quite smoothly today and I don't anticipate any further problems."

He said teachers were to meet to discuss the issue.

Principal Gordon House earlier said disciplinary action would be taken only if the instigators of the walkout could be identified.

road is completely restored.

The Canadian National Railway main line from Smithers to Prince Rupert will be out for about five weeks because of mudslides.

Meanwhile, about 24 tons of milk arrived Monday in Terrace to fill shortages.

Residents have been buying milk and bread in large quantities, with one store reporting customers buying up to 40 litres at a time in anticipation of shortages.

Local bakeries are permitted four hours of baking time a day by Pacific Northern Gas, which is rationing supplies until it repairs a 185-metre break in its mainline about 90 kilometres east of Terrace.

Residents have been asked to keep temperatures in their homes down to 16 degrees Celsius in a bid to conserve natural gas, while temperatures outside have dipped to five or six degrees above freezing.

Seven Terrace schools, heated by natural gas, remained closed Monday, although students were attending briefly each morning to pick up assignments. Five others were open and being heated by other means.

A company spokesman said it hopes to have a bypass line in operation by Wednesday.

Five juveniles were being questioned Monday by Terrace RCMP after vandals caused $1,500 damage to two helicopters, used to ferry highways ministry workers and supplies around the community.

AWARDS DOUBLED

The education ministry has doubled the value of its Grade 12 scholarship awards to $1,000 from $500 as a challenge to students who write the scholarship examinations and to outstanding students in vocational and career programs to develop their full potential.

Additional Rate Hikes Forecast was a strong likelihood its decision this week to increase interest rates would cause hardship including the possibility of higher unemployment, .

"It was the best choice we had in terms of the country's economic welfare, but it wasn't a very agreeable choice," he told MPs in an appearance before the commons finance committee.

Defending the central bank's decision Sunday to increase its trend-setting lending rate to a record 10.75 per cent, Bouey said the bank feared that if Canada let the traditional spread between its interest rates and those of the United States narrow the result would be "more trouble and trouble of a permanent nature."

B.C.'s Finance Minister Evan Wolfe said in Victoria the increase in the bank rate will have a serious impact on B.C.'s economy.

"Obviously continued acceleration in these rates would have a deterrent effect on expansion — capital expansion of one kind or another, housing and so on," Wolfe said in an interview.

Wolfe said, however, that financial indicators show the B.C. economy will continue to grow at a stable rate for the rest of the year and in 1979.

"I wouldn't say we will be looking at boom times again, but there's no reason to anticipate we will be looking at a recession," he said.

Big Diamond Deal After Lone Wolf's $10M Bank Diddle

SAN DIEGO (AP) — A 32-year-old computer expert, held on $6 million bail in the theft of $10.2 million in bank funds for a Russian diamond deal, worked alone on the sophisticated scheme, the FBI says.

Stanley Mark Rifkin was arraigned Monday before U.S. Magistrate Harry McCue on a charge of interstate transportation of stolen property in what has been described by officials as one of the largest theft-by-wire schemes ever.

The charge carries a maximum penalty of 10 years in prison and a $10,000 fine. But Assistant U.S. Attorney Michael Lippman said a federal grand jury in Los Angeles may indict Rifkin on other charges. A hearing on the stolen-property charge was set for Nov. 17.

The FBI said Rifkin, in a scheme involving bank computers and secret codes, transferred $10.2 million from a Security Pacific Bank in Los Angeles to the Swiss bank account of Russalmaz, a branch of the Soviet government that handles diamond exports.

"It does appear as though the entire scheme was conceived and perpetrated by Rifkin himself," said Roger Young, FBI agent in San Diego.

Young said there was no indication the Russians knew the money for the diamonds had been stolen. "The Russians had to be co-operative," Young said. "They deal in cash and cash was offered."

The FBI agent said Rifkin used a phoney passport to go to Switzerland to pick up the diamonds, which were bought from the Russians at the wholesale price of $8.1 million.

Bank officials said earlier that about $2 million of the transferred money has been located in bank channels, and the bank is in the process of recovering that money. They said the diamonds will become bank property.

When Rifkin was arrested Sunday in Carlsbad, Calif., Young said, he had $12,000 in cash and diamonds with a retail value of $13 million.

Security Pacific officials said Rifkin learned the bank's procedures while working for a computer firm that did business with the bank.

"That's how he got in in the first place," said Paul Smith, executive vice-president and treasurer for Security Pacific. "He was familiar with our layout and with the people. He was well known to our people and they assumed that he was there on the same business he was there for several months earlier."

An FBI affidavit and bank officials gave this chronology of the scheme:

On Oct. 25, Rifkin lied to bank personnel to enter the bank's wire-transfer room, where funds are transferred between banks by cable.

In the transfer room, Rifkin observed the special coding needed to effect a transfer—a code that is changed daily. Later that day, Rifkin called the transfer room and impersonated a bank officer to order funds transferred.

The money was subsequently transferred to a New York City bank and then to the Russalmaz account in Zurich. The New York bank has not been identified by officials.

On Oct. 27, Rifkin's broker bought $8,145,000 worth of diamonds from the Russians. Rifkin then picked up the diamonds. The broker told authorities he thought he was dealing with a legitimate businessman.

Bank officials said the amount of the transfer was not unusually large, as the bank transfers about $1 billion daily by wire.

25 Blacks Massacred By 'Phantom Killers'

SALISBURY (UPI) — In one of the most bizarre incidents of Rhodesia's six-year guerrilla war, a phantom squad of killers massacred 25 black civilians and then removed all evidence such as spent cartridges.

A military communique Monday said black nationalist guerrillas were probably responsible for the massacre, which occurred Saturday. The communique also reported the deaths of 20 guerrillas and black civilians in other incidents.

The communique said Rhodesian troops in northern Rhodesia heard prolonged bursts of automatic small arms fire and Sunday morning discovered the bullet-riddled bodies of the 25 black civilians.

"The whole area where the killings took place had been cleared completely of empty cartridge cases," the communique said.

"But investigations indicate that communist weapons were used by the killers. It is known that a group of terrorists (guerrillas) were in the vicinity before those murders took place as they had been observed by security forces at last light on Nov. 4," the communique said.

In other war deaths, the communique said Rhodesian troops killed nine guerrillas and two collaborators and charged that insurgents killed nine black civilians. It said five of the civilians were killed when their bus detonated a guerrilla landmine.

The latest slayings hiked to 140 the number of people slain in the first six days of November. Of the 140, 75 were black civilians killed by insurgents or by Rhodesian troops as suspected guerrilla collaborators.

Idi Orders Own Troops Shot

DAR ES SALAAM (AP) — Ugandan President Idi Amin is reported to have sent members of his "suicide battalion" and a mechanized unit to the rear area of the border war with Tanzania and told them to shoot Ugandans who retreat or desert.

Amin said he annexed 1,850 square kilometres of northwestern Tanzania in retaliation for an alleged Cuban-backed Tanzanian raid on Uganda and because Tanzanian President Julius Nyerere refused to recognize Amin's political legitimacy. Tanzania denies invading Uganda.

Dayan Raises New Stumbling Blocks

Shalom! Shout 2,000 As Begin Arrives

OTTAWA (CP) — A cheering, singing crowd of more than 2,000 welcomed Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin to Canada Monday.

Begin was met at the Uplands air base by Prime Minister Trudeau and the two leaders plunged into a milling mob of Jewish school children and adults shouting Shalom — the Hebrew greeting — to the slight Israeli prime minister.

The children and adults, many of them bused to the base from towns near Ottawa, waved Israeli flags and sang the Israeli national anthem as Begin stepped in to a large hangar for the official welcome.

He is here for talks with Prime Minister Trudeau. The talks are expected to centre on Middle East peace negotiations, approaching another critical stage.

The crowd cheered after singing O Canada and pressed around Begin, who strolled with Trudeau, shaking their hands.

Begin smiled broadly as he led a group of school children in singing a Hebrew song. He patted children, shook hands with an old man in a wheel chair and muttered Shalom repeatedly to well-wishers pushing around him.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Israeli Foreign Minister Moshe Dayan said Monday his government is unlikely to give final approval to a peace treaty with Egypt until the issues of U.S. aid and Sinai oil fields are "dealt with."

"The Israeli government feels these are essential parts of the agreement," Dayan told reporters after a meeting with U.S. State Secretary Cyrus Vance.

However, Dayan said negotiators are "making very good progress" in dealing with military aspects of the peace treaty. He rejected any suggestion that Israel is laying down conditions for approving the agreement with Egypt.

The aid at issue is for building two new Israeli airfields in the Negev to replace the ones in Sinai that will be taken over by Egypt as civilian installations.

The United States promised to help finance the Negev bases. Potential cost estimates have varied from $500 million to more than $1 billion.

Beyond that aid, Israel is discussing with Carter administration officials a long-term loan of about $3 billion. Dayan said Israel would not hold up approval of the treaty until a figure is reached.

A Different Kind of Slavery

As much as the nations of the third world have a right to be concerned about western press biases, Canada's strong position against a United Nations move to control news content through government intervention is to be vigorously applauded and defended.

At the current Paris conference of the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization, the Canadian delegation has voiced some the strongest opposition yet to the controversial resolution that would encourage journalists and news organizations to combat war-mongering, racism and apartheid. The suggestion represents, as delegation head John Roberts said, "a terrible step backwards," and a real threat to international press freedom.

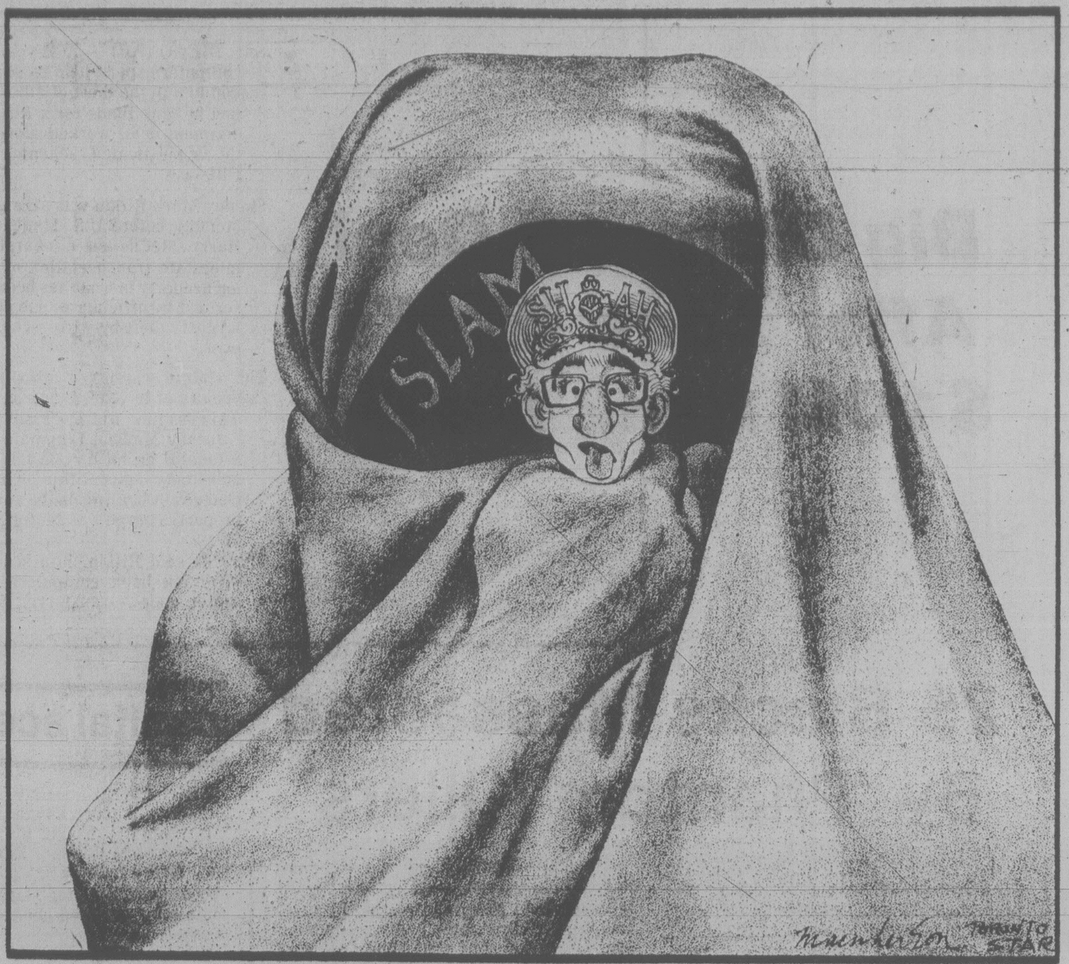
The origins of such an ill-advised resolution are not, however, difficult to explain. While the developing countries of the third world have grown steadily in global importance, and consequently in media coverage, the major news gathering agencies have remained largely European and North American. Events have been measured and analyzed consistently in western terms by western minds. The people most involved in the great stories of Africa, Asia and Latin America have not had the opportunity to tell their own stories to the world.

Rightly or wrongly, this is seen by many as another form of imperialism, a continuation of the dominance and control western nations did, and to a certain extent still do, demand and exercise throughout the third world. The emerging countries want the situation to end, want it badly enough that they are prepared to force it by means of government interference.

But surely the way to end hatred or racism or bias, whether born of ignorance or of design, is not by legislating an end to a free press. The relationship between a free state and a free press is in essence symbiotic — it is hard for one to live without the other — and to put such controls on the media would be to take on one slavery in exchange for the one developing peoples have striven so diligently to escape.

The Canadian position that imbalances in the news coming from industrialized nations must be corrected through education and communication may not excite the frustrated third world countries, but it is a reasonable stand. There may also be merit in suggestions that a third world news agency could offer a different perspective, serving the desires of the developing nations and educating the west.

But to vote for controls is to court totalitarianism while avoiding the real problem. On this issue, the Canadian team in Paris should stand firm.



Don't Stone the Crows, Mate

The crow, that most unfairly maligned of feathered species, is under attack in Saanich. Crows are perennially the subject of citizen's complaints, and just as often schemes to exterminate them are floated by crow-haters.

Saanich council recently heard an alderman call for a shooting season on corvus caurinus, because of the noise and nuisance he makes, his predations upon songbirds and occasional attacks on humans.

The complainers ought to learn a little about this fascinating, intelligent bird before they call for his destruction. Birdwatchers have noted the crow's problem-solving skills, his near-human deductive capabilities, his ability to learn from cause and effect.

This fall they've been seen loitering near well-travelled roads, and a few minutes' observation explains why. A crow will fly up into the air with an acorn, drop it near the centre of the road, and wait for passing traffic to shatter the hard shell. Then he hops out and eats the fragments and repeats the process.

Surely such fascinating demonstrations of animal wit (how indifferently dumb robins and finches seem by comparison) are worth a little noise once in a while.

If crows continue to bother you, and your municipal council won't help, we offer this suggestion from an Oak Bay resident back in 1952:

"Some years ago I found a dead crow by the roadside and I hung it in a tree in a prominent position. Literally hundreds of crows gathered around it and held a wake there for three days, and then flew away and did not return for the rest of the season."

Constitution Will Affect Few

OTTAWA — Each year, an average of six Canadians win the biggest lottery of all. They become senators. Depending upon the winner's age and health, the prize is worth up to $1 million, plus free office and parking and subsidized haircuts.

Once Canada gets a new constitution, which will take about two more years of horse trading — "negotiations," to use the preferred genteel phrase of those taking part — three of those annual winners will be given their tickets by provincial governments rather than by Ottawa, which today appoints all senators.

Those three Canadians will belong to an even more exclusive club. They, and perhaps some future members of federal regulatory boards and some provincial bureaucrats whose empires will suddenly expand, will be the only Canadians whose lives will be changed in any practical way the day after the new constitution is proclaimed.

Among all topics of political debate, constitutional reform is the most elusive. It has nothing to do with the price of tea. It won't make unemployment go down, nor the dollar go up. Its effects all are intangible and psychological. Indeed, the psychological consequences of failing to achieve a new constitution will be far greater than those of the actual doing of it: failure would signal to Canadians that their country, Quebec's possible separation aside, has become ungovernable.

Defines Character

At last week's constitutional conference in Ottawa, Richard Hatfield best described what is at stake. A new constitution, Hatfield said, "is necessary for the soul of Canada."

A new constitution, thus, is like a new flag: it does nothing, or very little, to Canadians, but it does do something to Canada. It defines the character of the country.

The new constitution is still too far away for the shape of the Canadian federation that it will express to be in sharp focus. Canada still is evolving politically. At the conference, for instance, Quebec Premier Rene Levesque twice used the phrase "special status."

One way to get perspective is to glance back at the 1971 Victoria constitutional conference. Then, only Trudeau's refusal to grant then-Quebec premier Robert Bourassa the jurisdictional room he demanded in social policy prevented Trudeau from achieving an agreement on a new constitution that he now seeks so frantically at the tag end of his term.

In the seven years since Victoria, the provinces have raised their jurisdictional sights from culture to international affairs, to natural resources, to fisheries and offshore minerals. At Victoria, a charter of human rights binding on all; today, a formula by which each province can "opt" in or out.

The haggling over the new constitution now will be done out of sight of the public. The constitutional committee set up by the conference will hold its first meeting, in private, at the Chateau Montebello, midway between Ottawa and Montreal, Nov. 23-25.

The committee members — the 22 federal and provincial ministers of justice and of intergovernmental affairs — will thereafter work their way through a so-called "short list" of priority subjects agreed to at the conference. The fruits of these labors then will be presented at a second full-scale televised conference next Feb. 5-6.

The committee will be lucky to bring forth more than a few lemons. At the close of this week's conference, the premiers and Trudeau could not even agree on what it was they had agreed to. The committee thus has been given no political direction.

To illustrate the difficulty, the draft communique proposed the first ministers express their agreement, "that the renewed constitution faithfully reflect the position and pesent functions of Her Majesty the Queen and the governor-general." A majority of the premiers demanded that the phrase "and the governor-general" be struck out, on the grounds they had not debated, let alone reached conclusions about, the role of the governor-general. (Later, the premiers struck out this entire section, as well as all other substantive sections.)

PIERRE TRUDEAU
. . . not much room to move

For six weeks a small committee of federal and provincial officials has tried to find the right literary place for the Queen in the new constitution. The task seems a simple one, since all governments agree that the Queen's place should be unchanged. Yet Ottawa's desire to add dignity to the office of the governor-general without at the same time downgrading that of the monarch has so far brought this committee to a stalemate.

In just three months, the new, larger interministerial constitutional committee will have to resolve, not just minor problems like the monarch but about a dozen major ones, such as finding the right words to confirm provincial jurisdiction over natural resources while at the same time protecting federal authority over extraprovincial trade.

Progress, though, will be achieved. The minimum probable amount is set by the need, recognized by most premiers, to signal to Quebecers in advance of their referendum that the Canadian federation can be reformed to their advantage. The maximum amount of progress that can be hoped for is set by the fact that most of the premiers — Levesque and the six Conservatives — are Trudeau's political opponents and thus are motivated to deny him a substantial success close to the next election.

The crucial decisions about the new constitution, though, have already been taken. Although Trudeau in the Commons attacked Clark as a potential prime minister who would "give away the store," Trudeau this week himself adopted the same "decentralized" shopping list — not all of it, but much of it — that Clark compiled at his 1977 Kingston conference with the then four Conservative premiers.

Political weakness has foreclosed all of Trudeau's other options. Last May, Trudeau published his version of a new constitution. He threatened to move unilaterally on "phase one," made up of his agenda items such as a charter of human rights and "patriation" of the constitution so that we could change it ourselves witht having to make a "pilgrimage" to Britain. The agenda items which interested the premiers — the expansion of provincial powers — would be reserved for a later, "phase two", said Trudeau.

An Election Slogan?

This week, Trudeau tore up his agenda and picked up that of the premiers. The constitutional committee's first priority, he agreed, would be to consider provincial demands in fields such as natural resources including fisheries, indirect taxes, and communications. Indeed, the conference almost broke down when the premiers balked at committing themselves in advance to agree to any of Trudeau's agenda items, such as patriation.

Rebuffed in the byelections and behind the polls, Trudeau had no choice but to deal with the premiers with kid gloves.

In reserve, Trudeau still has one mailed fist. At his closing press conference, Trudeau refused to admit that "unanimous consent" by the provinces, would be needed to allow him to at least patriate the constitution as a symbolic gesture of Canadianism.

If the constitutional committee makes little or no progress, Trudeau next year could attempt to transform patriation of the constitution into an emotional issue for the next election.

"Who will speak for Canada?" would be Trudeau's slogan for such a campaign. It would be great theatre, but would be as close to reality as is a soap opera. Trudeau, in the opening line of the final communique has already given the answer: "The [eleven] First Ministers of the Federation" speak for Canada.

Leave Crows Alone

It was with some trepidation I read the article (Crow Shooting to Backfire, says Sam; Times, Oct. 26) relating that Saanich council is planning to shoot the crows in the area. I would much prefer they spend their time having some of the nearby streets repaired — Knight Street and Aldridge being a case in point.

First, has anyone considered what an example this will be to the youngsters in the neighborhood? They might get the idea that shooting crows, and any other birds or animals might be the thing to do in a residential neighborhood.

I have lived in Colwood and near Sidney, and if there is a lack of small songbirds in the Saanich area it's a surprise to me. I have always had a bird bath and regularly feed the birds and never have I had such a steady stream of little customers as where I presently live.

Killing crows is a wasteful priority, says reader. Fix streets instead.

True, when the crows or any of the larger birds such as seagulls are around, the smaller ones keep away, but later their turn comes and everyone seems to get their fair share. Sure, at times the crows are a bit noisy, but so are the cats at 3 a.m., and the youngsters who squeal their tires and drive around with unmuffled cars at all hours.

Shall we suggest they be shot too? At least the crows go to bed at a reasonable hour. Some of the cats come regularly looking for a tasty snack of some small bird knowing they come to bathe and feed. It's nature's way and I'm sure the owners of these cats would not want any harm to befall their pets. Why make an issue of the crows who are no noisier or nuisancy than many other things? Let's live and let live. — Mrs. V. Smith, 3385 Veteran Street.

More Beds on Way

I wish to respond to recent criticisms published in your newspaper regarding the over-utilization of acute-care beds in Victoria's two major hospitals, resulting from the lack of beds in the long term care program.

This is not a new problem. It has existed for some years, not only in Victoria but in other areas of the province. In order to alleviate this recurring situation we introduced the long term care program (LTC), so that we could free as many acute care beds as possible. It is a problem that will not be resolved overnight, but I am pleased to say that the LTC program is steadily achieving its purpose. It is getting people who no longer require expensive acute care services, into less costly intermediate and extended care beds.

The residents of Victoria and district should be made aware that in the reasonably immediate future the Capital Regional District will be getting more than 500 new intermediate care beds and 200 new extended care beds for the long term care program. The following is a list of intermediate care projects in Victoria and district:

☐ Luther Court Society — 66 beds, due to open in January, 1979; Sunset Lodge, Esquimalt (Salvation Army) — 120 beds, due to open in June 1979; James Bay Community project — 70 beds with construction due to start in 1979; Baptist House Society — 150 beds, construction due to start in 1979.

☐ In addition to these, two private facilities will provide a combined total of 109 additional beds in 1979.

☐ There will also be an additional 225 extended care beds when the Glengary and Priory hospital extensions are completed. The Glengarry beds will be ready before the New Year, while the Priory beds will be available in March. When we take into account the return of some beds at the Saanich Peninsula and Gorge Road hospitals to other uses, the net gain in extended care beds will be about 182.

While it may well be true that there are 164 long-term care patients occupying beds at the Royal Jubilee hospital, simple arithmetic shows that the new beds available in the coming months — some of them in a matter of weeks — will relieve this caseload. We just need a little more patience. The list of projects planned, underway and almost completed is indicative that things are going to improve fairly rapidly. — R. H. McClelland, Minister of Health.

View Royal Sewers

View Royal, an area of about 1,200 acres, has a population of about 4,000 and about 1,000 dwellings. Sewage problems have existed for many years due to a considerable number of faulty private sewage disposal systems. These are, from time to time, exaggerated for various political and commercial reasons. Most residents, including myself, feel the situation should be corrected.

Many feel that before any major decisions are made there should be proper studies and official public hearings on all aspects of the issue. Many appeals for such opportunities to be properly informed, have been made by individuals and groups to the View Royal fire trustees, the regional district and the provincial government. There has been no positive response.

There have been three other "Do you want sewer" referenda over about the last 10 years; all have been defeated. During this time, there has been no adequate official studies or public hearings. There have been public information meetings, generally thinly-disguised selling jobs for the regional district's proposal.

I believe the rejections were largely because residents with a grain of common sense are reluctant to sign a cheque for enormous sums of money for a program which would have profound effects on the community (and their taxes) without full information first.

People are justifiably suspicious of a salesman who promises you a wonderful deal but won't give full details until after you have signed.

The regional district says the only proposal which can be officially considered is the installation of a conventional sewer collection system for most of the area, discharging via a regional trunk to the Macaulay Point outfall.

In early 1977, the regional district acquired the authority to requisition up to $7 million from the taxpayers for View Royal sewer purposes and last month approved a resolution authorizing it to borrow $5.2 million for the sewer project. The residents who will be paying had no involvement and, for the most part, no knowledge of this action. Even if the present population of View Royal (about 4,000) increases to 7,300 by the year 1996 (as per the community plan) this is still an enormous sum of money.

It is my guess that additional taxes per household could be somewhere between $100 and $300 per year for 25 years plus an initial connection cost of, say, $400 to $3,000. This would be in addition to the taxes (of questionable legality) which residents have been paying for "downstream benefits" since 1972.

While I accept the regional district's proposal as one of the courses of action to be considered, I do not accept it as the only one to be considered or as the subject of a yes-or-no referendum without full information available well before such a referendum. In particular, information on cost-sharing arrangements both for "capital" and "user" charges which can be very inequitable.

There are unquestionably alternative approaches or combinations of approaches available, some of which, from the environmental and social impact aspects, could be superior and cost many residents less than one-tenth of the regional district's proposal. However, the regional district as presently structured is either incapable of, or determined to avoid, a forum for orderly and informed debate and serious investigation of any concepts which could question its mindless committment to the recommendations of the Sanitary Sewage Study of 1966.

This unfortunate attitude is evident in various other sewer issues — Esquimalt Lagoon, the new hospital site, Langford, Colwood and Metchosin, Ganges on Saltspring Island and Sooke.

While I do not suggest there are easy solutions to these problems, I believe that present regional policies of collecting ever-increasing volumes of wastes from ever-increasing areas to be dumped "somewhere," will, in the long term, prove to be wasteful, expensive and uncivilized.

In the current View Royal sewer issue, our regional representative, Al Beasley, assured residents at a public meeting prior to his election in 1977 that he favored adequate public meetings on the matter and "looking into" any alternative approaches.

At a ratepayers' meeting March 20, the regional representative stated that there would be full information available well in time for any referendum.

May 15, he again assured us that information would be available. A representative of the View Royal fire trustees indicated costs would be available "in a few weeks,"

At another meeting Sept. 25, the regional representative maintained that there would be as many information meetings as necessary held before the referendum.

The referendum is now a week and a half away, no information has been made public. I find this a most disappointing situation. — John White, 309 View Royal Avenue.

'Crude Cudgels' Defend Secrecy

THE GLOBE AND MAIL
An Editorial

Quebec's Keable Commission has the right to continue investigating illegal acivities of the Royal Canadian Mounted Police. The federal government can use brute, unreasoning power to frustrate that investigation.

That is the sum and total of the Supreme Court of Canada decision released last week. The court held that since the administration of justice is a provincial responsibility, Quebec could validly establish the commission and it could trace back authorization for the RCMP's wrongdoing to the offices of the cabinet, if need be. But it could not undertake a general examination of the management and administration of the force. That would be going too far, it said.

On the other hand, the federal government is free to use any of the cudgels we have come to know and hate to beat back people seeking to breach the walls of secrecy. The cudgels are:

- The Official Secrets Act, which allows government officials to stamp anything they want confidential and then prosecute anyone, even an inquiry commissioner, for having it or releasing it without permission;
- The Federal Court Act, which allows the government to obtain a court order prohibiting disclosure of documents simply by certifying that they would disclose confidential cabinet information or would be injurious to international relations, federal-provincial relations or national defence or security; and
- The constitutional principle that provinces cannot subpoena cabinet ministers to testify or to produce documents because the ministers represent the Crown in the right of Canada and no one can force the Crown to do anything.

Wouldn't Richard Nixon have loved powers such as those!

We have been told that RCMP officers have committed arson, theft, illegal entry, illegal opening of mail and break and entry. We know they were not acting as renegades. We know that some senior officers knew of and condoned what was going on. We also have the allegation from a former commissioner of the RCMP that previous solicitors-general knew what was going on.

We also knew that some political stonewalling has occurred and that the prime minister has suddenly changed course and said that his government is not going to be as free and easy in providing information to the federal royal commission examining exactly the same illegal activities as he had led the nation to believe it would be.

While we have these crude cudgels available on the law books, we can have no sense of security in the rule of law. While we have a government prepared to use these cudgels, we have no rule of law, period: we have crime and cover-up.

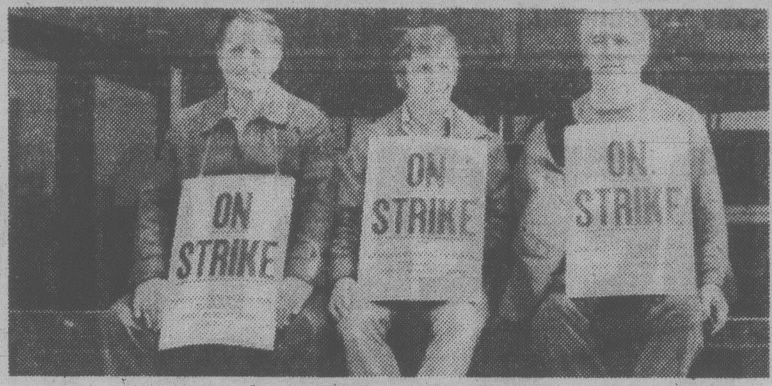
Alternatives to the Strike

By WILFRED LIST
The Globe and Mail



Public tolerance is declining

The right to strike has become a tenuous one when it threatens to disrupt an important public service. As public tolerance for strikes declines, the right of workers, enshrined in legislation, to withdraw their services is being scrapped by legislative edicts.

The former standard under which governments intervened to prevent or halt a strike, based on a need to protect the safety and health of the nation, has been superceded by new guidelines. Damage to the economy and to public convenience is now the criterion for government intervention and for the ad hoc amendments to the labor law providing the right to strike.

The offensive is not only aimed at groups in the public service. In fact, other than the federal legislation that sent postal workers back to their jobs, and the Ontario act to quickly end a strike by Toronto transit workers, most recent legislative measures to stop or end strikes have been directed at the private sector.

In terms of inconvenience and economic damage, strikes in segments of the private sector have the greater effect — walkouts that shut down the railways, airlines, the ports and grain-handling facilities, among others.

It is no longer valid to build procedures for resolving labor-management disputes on the premise that there is a difference between the public and private sector, so it is simplistic to suggest a prohibition against strikes by government employees as the panacea for industrial unrest. But the public employee has become a popular scapegoat for governments unable to cope with the responsibility of solving Canada's economic problems.

If there are to be alternatives to the strike, they must be based on a distinction between employment critical to the well-being of the community and that in which strikes threaten less potential harm.

The feelings of frustration and anger that pervade the population when a major strike threatens to disrupt an important public service are a new development. In the past we have weathered lengthy strikes by transit workers, marine unions and even postal workers without the economy coming apart at the seams. But inflation, unemployment and concern about the economy as well as personal uncertainty and apprehension about the future have combined to reduce public acceptance of the right to strike.

A Gallup poll last month found that Canadians by a margin of about two to one believe workers should not be permitted to strike in occupations where it would seriously inconvenience the public.

There is nothing sacrosanct about the right to strike when it endangers public health and safety. But the current backlash against strikes by public employees is, more often than not, an emotional and political reaction rather than a reasoned and studied assessment of the problem.

Without the worker's right to strike, there is also an implicit denial to the employer of the right to disagree. Compulsory arbitration is favored by employer groups for public employees, but they oppose it just as strongly when it affects their own decision-making freedom.

In the perfect society, there would be no strikes and no need to strike, but that utopian state is as far beyond reach in labor-management as it is in other areas of conflict.

Theodore W. Kheel, who was involved in mediating the newspaper dispute in New York, has been the administrative director of the Institute of Collective Bargaining and Group Relations in the United States. He once wrote that the strike and collective bargaining are Siamese twins that "cannot be severed. But that does not mean that the bargaining process cannot be improved. It does not mean that parties cannot voluntarily accept arbitration with carefully designed limitations as an alternative to the prospect of a strike. But the essential point of departure is a proper understanding of the role of the strike in collective bargaining and the importance of the bargaining process in a democratic society."

Here in Canada, William Kelly, assistant deputy labor minister and the Federal Labor Department's chief labor trouble-shooter, takes a similar view. Kelly says that, unlike the situation in the United States, the government and public in Canada conclude too quickly that strikes should be nipped in the bud. "There seems to be a mass hysteria.

"If either party feels it can achieve through legislation what is unattainable at the bargaining table, then look out," Kelly warns.

If the right to strike is a necessary adjunct of a democratic society, this does not mean that a test of strength that often weakens both sides or destroys one or the other is an immutable tenet of collective bargaining.

Although arbitration is a dirty word in the lexicon of most union leaders, the voluntary use of arbitration has been successful in many disputes. But its merits must be sold to the union members as well as to negotiators for both sides. It cannot be imposed from above. Compulsory arbitration in Australia has failed to reduce the incidence of strikes, although they are shorter than strikes in Canada.

Perhaps one of the most interesting techniques embodying the voluntary arbitration process is the combination of mediation and arbitration, more commonly known as med-arb. It is this process that is being applied in the postal dispute, although it was imposed on the parties — particularly the union — rather than accepted voluntarily. The idea emanated from Kelly, an enthusiastic supporter of the concept.

Med-arb is an innovative, creative and flexible application of mediation and arbitration that gives the two sides the opportunity to negotiate their own agreement. But the med-arbitrator has more muscle than the orthodox mediator because he makes the final, binding decisions about issues on which the parties fail to agree.

Seeking and trying out new techniques that offer a more workable alternative to the strike appear to provide more hope for the future of labor-management relations than the use of raw legislative power to outlaw strikes.

But if unions that have the capacity to inflict massive inconvenience and economic damage within the community and the country continue to regard various forms of voluntary arbitration with the same abhorrence as in the past, they will invite the very legislation they so strongly oppose.

Things Aren't That Bad

By ANTHONY WESTELL

OTTAWA — A Time for Reason is the title of the Economic Council of Canada's 15th annual review published last week.

Amen to that.

Our worst enemies at present are all those Canadians — probably a majority — wallowing in an unreasonably pessimistic view of our problems and prospects.

We have managed, as a country, to convince ourselves, for example, that we are deep in an economic recession and that these are hard times.

Rubbish. The real production of goods and services will rise this year at a rate close to 4 per cent, which is not far below the long-term average.

And if you try to fight your way into a downtown bar at lunch-time, a high-price restaurant at night or a luxury boutique in the high-rent district, you'll find it hard to maintain the idea that the middle-class are being oppressed by taxation.

We are told almost daily that government spending is out of control and that the budget deficit is horrendous and driving us all to bankruptcy.

The Economic Council points out, quietly, that as a proportion of gross national expenditure, Canada's deficit is less than that of Japan or West Germany — two countries usually held up as models of fiscal probity and economic good sense.

We like to tell ourselves that foreigners are buying up our industries left, right and centre and that we are rapidly becoming pawns of sinister multinational corporations. In fact, the proportion of the Canadian economy under foreign control has been edging downwards.

We make our flesh creep by moaning about the amount of money the government has borrowed abroad and "spent" to support the Canadian dollar. It sounds as if billions of dollars are being squandered.

But when you spend, you usually get something in return. What we are getting in return for all the foreign currency we are borrowing and spending is, of course, Canadian dollars.

All those billions of Canadian dollars go into the government's bank account to help pay its bills.

Much of the pessimism about our economy originates with opposition party critics who make the worst of our circumstances for obvious political reasons, and with the news media which always exaggerate bad news because the customers seem to like it.

The danger is that we shall talk ourselves into a state of helpless depression or that we shall be stampeded into a rush to the reactionary right — that is, we shall lose confidence in the ability of government to manage our affairs and put our blind trust in business and the free market.

The Economic Council points out that what we require is not less government, but more vigorous government — specifically, a major tax cut, accepting a higher deficit until resulting growth swells the government coffers.

In the current national mood, A Time for Reason is a small quiet voice pointing out that things are not as bad as we imagine and that the future may be quite good.

But who is listening? We seem to prefer to be miserable.

End of the Canadian Dream

By PETER C. NEWMAN
Maclean's

By making the worst of a bad situation, our Ottawa politicians are driving some of this country's more flexible patriots in a highly dangerous direction. Over their pre-luncheon martinis and after-dinner cigars, an increasing number of Canadian senators, businessmen, wheelers, dealers and just plain appeasers are talking up the notion of getting out of the economic morass in which we find ourselves by plunging into a common-market arrangement with the United States.

This, they claim, would ensure a much more efficient allocation of Canadian resources. We would, both as a nation and as individuals, become richer as the slide in our standard of living is reversed by giving this country's secondary manufacturers the chance to obtain what they can have in no other way: access to a huge consumer market. Carl Beigie, head of the prestigious C. D. Howe Research Institute, has called for a "Canada-U.S. economic deal," and Ottawa's Senate Committee on Foreign Affairs recently recommended serious examination of "North American free trade."

The establishment of economic union between the two countries would dismantle the tariffs that still encumber the $60 billion in annual trade which crosses the U.S.-Canadian border, gaining our manufacturers overnight access to a quantum increase in customers. But at the same time, American factories would be swamping our domestic markets with their output, taking advantage of the built-in price advantages of their longer production runs. More seriously, future industrial expansion would almost certainly take place south of the 49th parallel, because the two main factors that go into deciding where to produce any item — proximity of market and cost of labor — would clearly favor U.S. locations. (Canada's only long-term experience with free trade supports this pessimistic conclusion. Our agricultural implements industry, which has had duty-free access to the U.S. since 1944, has quietly transferred most of its production facilities south of the border. There are, for example, more than 600,000 tractors on Canadian farms, yet Massey-Ferguson assembles its units in Detroit.)

Economic considerations aside, there simply is no way that two nations of such unequal population, temper and power, could become economic partners without Canada being swallowed up in the process. As George Ball, a former U.S. undersecretary of state, accurately predicted: "Economic integration will require for its full realization a progressively expanding area of common political decision."

Ball foresaw what the proponents of the common market idea refuse to recognize: that North American free trade would lead from the necessary harmonization of the two countries' monetary and fiscal policies, through coordinated security regulations, equalized anti-trust laws, to a common currency and eventually some form of common citizenship. It would be the end of the Canadian dream.

PILOT UNINJURED IN 'COPTER CRASH

CRD Expected To Back E&N

The Capital Regional District is expected to appear before the Canadian Transport Commission's hearing here on Nov. 15 in support of continuation of the E&N railway passenger service.

Murray Glazier, chairman of the regional planning and economic development committee, has called a special meeting for Wednesday to define the regional district's stand.

Glazier, who has invited directors of the western community to attend, said he has spoken to Langford director Ed Lubick, who is enthusiastic about the city's proposal to enlarge the passenger service to provide commuter service between the city and the western community.

Glazier said Wednesday's meeting will determine whether the regional district should appear at the hearing, the points it will make at the hearing and whether the regional board will support Victoria's stand on the proposed commuter service.

Industrial Park Airing on Ch. 10

An hour-long panel discussion of the Saanich industrial park controversy will be featured on Channel 10 at 7 p.m. Thursday.

The program, to be presented by the Royal Oak Community Association, will attempt to look at all sides of the issue to prepare Saanich residents for voting on the Nov. 18 referendum, association president Ben Pires said today.

Pires said Mayor Mel Couvelier will present the arguments in favor of an industrial park at Interurban Road, Ald. Fred Severson will outline the case for the Royal Oak site and Ald. Bob Cameron will tell viewers why he opposes both proposals.

Titled "The industrial zone question has a lot of questions," the program will have former deputy consumer affairs minister Bill Neilson as moderator.

Vandalism Doubts

Principals in some Greater Victoria schools record accidental window breakage as vandalism because maintenance crews respond faster, Trustee Mary Breer said Monday.

The school board was discussing $64,000 allotted for glass replacement this year.

Secretary-treasurer Carl Warner had told trustees damage done by vandals is coded in school budgets and can be easily separated from other kinds of damage.

Canada-First Urged for Car Rentals

Jim Tennant is doing the groundwork now to make sure that the "absolutely disastrous" system used in 1976 for car rental firms to bid for space at the country's major airports is not used again.

He is vice-president, corporate development, for Holiday Rent-A-Car, a Canadian-owned company based in London, Ont.

Holiday was one of six firms which bid in 1976 for five counters at Canada's nine major airports.

Tennant's company was the unsuccessful bidder and because of the way the tendering system was handled, five of the companies have sued the federal government and Tennant says a sixth — Budget Rent-A-Car — is considering doing so.

Tennant was in Victoria to check out the car rental market and work on setting up a company office here.

He said he and the members of his family who own and manage Holiday are bitter about the government's handling of the bidding and the fact that a Canadian-owned company lost out in a bid to do business at the country's airports.

Tennant feels that Canadian companies should not have to bid for space at Canadian airports in opposition to the large U.S. firms like Hertz and Budget.

In 1976, Budget and Hertz were the top two successful bidders. Next were Host and Tilden, Canadian companies, and then Avis, another U.S. firm.

At one stage the 1976 bidding issue was raised in the Commons when Transport Minister Otto Lang faced charges that political considerations entered into the allocation of space at the airports.

Tennant says there is no way that his company, which has 2,000 cars, can compete in a bidding battle with U.S. firms like Budget, with 8,000 cars, or Hertz with 5,500 cars.

Airports account for well over half of these major companies' business, he says, and the only reason they can bid as low as they do is because of their volume of business.

Holiday recently submitted a brief to the federal government in hopes of changing the bidding system in time for next year's tendering. The current contracts run out Dec. 31, 1979.

Tennant would like to see the Canadian-owned firms get counters at the airports automatically and then have the other U.S. companies bid for the remaining positions.

A spokesman for Transport Canada, the federal department responsible for airport matters, said extensive consultations are planned with the car rental industry "with a view to revising and correcting the difficulties encountered in the 1976 tender call."

He said so far Transport Canada has not taken a position on the opinion of firms like Holiday that Canadian-owned companies should get automatic access to the country's nine major airports.

by himself and his brother Michael.

Seizing on the hay-making explanation raised in Ald. Vantreight's letter, Mika asked: "Do they (farmers) usually make hay on their own property or someone else's?"

Mayor Mel Couvelier: "That is what is commonly called a rhetorical question?"

Mika: "I guess if we don't have an answer it will have to remain so."

Vantreight senior remained silent following the exchange.

Ald. Ian Cass said while recognizing the fact that the Vantreights had acted wrongly in transgressing on the rights of the municipality, council should also bear in mind that the motivation behind the act was basically sound.

He reminded council that for years it had been preaching the gospel of increased agricultural productivity, and argued that Saanich would gain little by evicting the brothers, taking them to court or both.

"You are saying that with a daffodil in your lapel?" Mika interjected.

Unemployed At Year's Low

year earlier, Statistics Canada said.

Finance Minister Jean Chretien said later at a Commons finance committee meeting that he is satisfied with the figures. But he also said in an interview that 8.2 per cent unemployment still is too high.

The drop in the jobless rate brought qualified congratulations from John Crosbie (PC—St. John's West), who added he is sure the decline has little to do with government policy.

Crosbie predicted that Monday's increase in the Bank of Canada interest rate to a record 10.75 per cent will mean a reversal of the trend.

Since the summer of 1977, the jobless rate has been at its highest levels since the Depression of the 1930s, hitting a peak of 8.6 per cent between March and June. Most private economists have been predicting that it will worsen in 1979.

Opposition critics have charged that recent increases in interest rates, spurred by rises in the Bank of Canada's pace-setting rate, will lead to more unemployment.

On a provincial basis, the biggest improvement in unemployment last month was registered in Manitoba, where the jobless rate fell to 6.5 per cent from 7.3 per cent in September.

But there also were big improvements in the industrial provinces of Ontario and Quebec. In Ontario, the jobless rate fell to seven per cent in October from 7.5 per cent in the previous month and in Quebec the rate dropped to 10.4 per cent from 10.9 per cent.

Quebec remained the province with the highest total of unemployed, with 268,000 jobless last month, compared with 290,000 in September. There were 259,000 unemployed in Ontario last month compared with 286,000 in September.

In Newfoundland, perennially the province with the highest jobless rate, unemployment stood at 16.8 per cent of the labor force in October, down from 16.9 per cent in the previous month.

Prince Edward Island had a jobless rate of 9.9 per cent last month, compared with 10.1 per cent in September; New Brunswick's rate fell to 12.4 per cent from 12.8 per cent.

In Saskatchewan, which has the lowest unemployment rate among the provinces, the rate fell to 4.6 per cent in October from 4.9 per cent in the previous month.

Alberta's unemployment rate improved to 4.7 per cent last month from 5.1 per cent in the previous month.

In Nova Scotia, the jobless rate rose to 10.2 per cent from 9.8 per cent in September.

Unemployment dropped for all major age and sex groups surveyed by Statistics Canada. For men aged 25 and over, the rate fell to 5.2 per cent from 5.5 per cent while for men 15 to 24 the jobless rate dropped to 14.3 per cent from 14.7 per cent.

For women 25 and over, the jobless rate dropped to 7.5 per cent from 7.9 per cent .

clined comment when asked to name those arrested.

But unofficial reports said all ministers of former Prime Minister Amir Abbas Hoveyda's cabinets during his 13-year term were arrested by the military authorities.

The fate of Hoveyada, whose arrest and trial was demanded repeatedly by opposition groups and parliament members, was not known.

Iran's first soldier prime minister in 25 years Monday appealed to opponents of the regime to work for peace and reconciliation. but rebel opposition elements vowed to fight on.

Gen. Gholam Reza Azhari, head of the shah's military regime, went on Iranian television Monday hours after the shah made a similar gesture and called on the Shiite Moslem clergy, political groups, students, workers and farmers to unite to end the chaos threatening the country.

"I have been given this responsibility for a limited period while the people and the country are passing through a sensitive and historical juncture," Azhari said.

He pledged to "fight disorder and corruption of all kinds" and to restore "economic, social and mental security" to all Iranians.

But in Paris, Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini, the shah's leading opponent, said the appointment of a military government was "utterly unsatisfactory" and renewed his demand the shah step down in favor of an Islamic government.

"The struggle of our peopie will continue until we achieve these goals," the 78-year-old religious leader said.

There was still no indication whether the armed forces had succeeded in ending the strike by 30,000 workers of Iran's burgeoning, $22 billion a year oil industry and, if they did, at what cost.

Troops and oil workers had clashed, resulting in numerous injuries, shortly before the announcement of the military government Monday.

Ottawa Cuts Costing B.C. $56M

B.C. will have to make up $56 million — not $81 million as forecast earlier — in next year's budget to compensate for federal cutbacks.

Finance Minister Evan Wolfe said Monday B.C. will get off lighter than first feared under Ottawa's plan to trim $2.5 billion in expenditures by the end of next year.

A one-year postponement of incentive grants that would help municipalities with such projects as neighborhood improvement and water and sewage treatment facilities will cost B.C. between $15 and $25 million, Wolfe said.

The rest of the cutbacks will be in the areas of block fundings for social services that Ottawa has backed out of.

Wolfe said B.C. will have to pressure Ottawa to initiate the municipal incentive grants after the one-year postponement.

"The federal government has a tendency to forget those things once they've been stopped," he said.

If Ottawa ultimately decides not to go ahead with the incentive grants to the municipalities in future, the loss will escalate well above the $15 to $25 million estimated for this year. Wolfe said.

Other provinces are feeling the pinch more than B.C., he said, especially the ones known as have-not provinces because of a fairly significant cutback in equalization grants.

B.C. — considered a have province — didn't qualify for the equalization grants and is not affected by that cutback.

Wolfe said he couldn't detail where the $56 million that has to be made up will come from, but reiterated his earlier promise that no current or promised provincial programs will be cut because of Ottawa's actions.

"It will be difficult, but by using responsible restraint I think we can absorb this kind of shock," the minister said.

Wolfe who has just returned from talks with his fedeal counterpart Jean Chretien said the new federal budget expected this month won't likely include anything substantial in the way of personal tax cuts.

The increase to 10¾ per cent loan interest rate set by the Bank of Canada won't have a serious impact on B.C. unless the upward trend continues, Wolfe said.

Increasing loan interest rates works against an expanding economy especially in such areas as housing, the minister said.

Wolfe is as confident as ever in B.C.'s economy: "We're not looking at boom times again, but there's no reason to anticipate we will be looking at a recession."

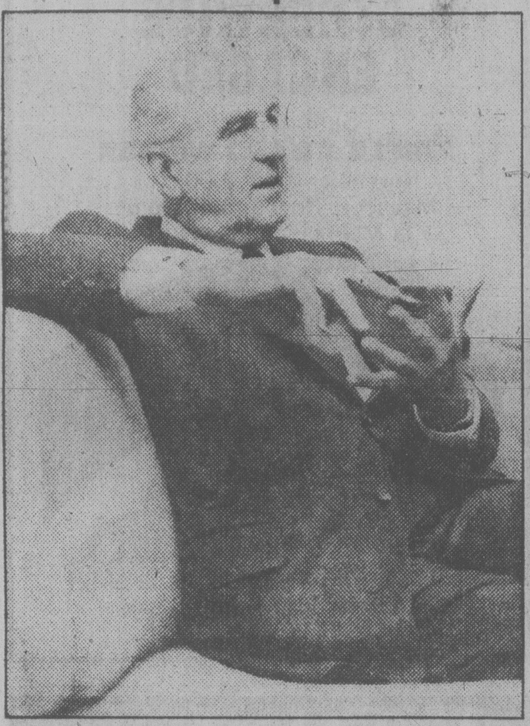
'We Won't Be Able To Replace Ourselves'



Futurologist Geoffrey N. Calvert says today's unemployment problems will be minor compared to those brought on by a decline in population. By the late 1980s, he predicts, there will be shortages in the work force

By AB KENT
Times Staff

TODAY'S massive unemployment pales besides the population problem Canadians will face 10 years down the road, says futurologist Geoffrey N. Calvert.

While Third World nations continue to cartwheel through the population explosion, Canada and other industrial nations will be in a population decline, their fertility rate ebbing.

"That's terrifying. We won't be able to replace ourselves," Calvert said in an interview.

The alarming outlook is expressed matter-of-factly by one of North America's most respected authorities on such issues as food and energy resources, economics, population studies and pension funding.

On the problems of population and employment, Calvert notes the great concentration of unemployed is among young people, the result of the post-Second World War baby boom which lasted into the 1960s.

"It produced a tidal wave of young people trying to enter a labor market incapable of absorbing suddenly such vast numbers."

In time, this youth bulge will be incorporated into the labor market as others reach retirement age and by the late 1980s, Calvert expects, there will be shortages in the work force.

Calvert says there are several factors responsible, among them a definite social trend away from families, a reluctance to bring children into an unsettled world, a high rate of divorce, a high rate of abortions and generally fewer couples having children.

At present there is a rise in the birth rate, but the opposite is true of the fertility rate — the actual proportion of women in society of child-bearing age, Calvert said.

Calvert has been consulted by government, national institutions and industry and has worked for the World Bank.

Since retiring from a leading international actuarial consulting firm, he has remained active as a private consultant, author and lecturer while maintaining his home at Towner Bay, near Sidney.

His latest publication, Twelve Faces of Inflation, appearing in the current edition of Thinking About the Future, summarizes the problems he says are combining to strangle North American economic society.

Another will go to Prime Minister Trudeau, because with few exception, the arguments are as applicable in Canada as they are in the U.S. Only the figures differ.

In fact Calvert says the record on this side of the border shows "disastrous management on the Canadian government's part."

SINCE June, Calvert has faced three audiences with his treatment of the subject — the Canadian Association for Pension Investment, which represents $12 billion in retirement funds, the Financial Executives Institute and the Rotary Club of Victoria. All received it with enthusiasm, he says.

When Calvert writes he distills the leading statistics and expert opinions of key figures and organizations in North America and in other parts of the world. His years in the business of projecting and predicting have brought him into contact with professors of economics, consulting actuaries, businessmen and research institutions.

It is not uncommon for Calvert to spend months researching, writing and editing a single presentation.

He says inflation has 12 faces none of which should be taken more seriously than another — all must be dealt with.

They are: the control of money supply.

Government spending.

The bureaucracy explosion.

Transfer payments — social benefits provided through taxes.

The cost-price index.

Rising taxes.

Imbalance of payments in foreign trade.

Labor negotiations.

Other employment costs, like symbolic salaries paid to top executives who ought to set an example by holding the line.

Energy and resource depletion.

Imported inflation, as when coffee prices skyrocket.

Expectations — the anticipation of continued inflation.

Calvert said the latter is a most insidious and perilous factor:

"One of the greatest dangers today is the tendency to accept inflation as one of the constant factors in our economy," he warns.

Calvert says public opposition to this fallacy is needed to arouse legislators, who in turn will concentrate the problem where it belongs — in the federal cabinet.

The government already must take most responsibility for the extent of inflation.

FOR example, if Canada's economy is a reflection of the American scene and the U.S. national deficit amounts to $60 billion, the Canadian deficit should be viewed on a one-tenth scale, to arrive at $6 billion.

Instead it is $11 billion, Calvert said.

"No wonder Canada's got roaring inflation — there's a source right there."

In addition, the Canadian money supply has been allowed to increase far beyond the natural growth of our Gross National Product, which has been 3 to 4 per cent a year, or about one-third the rate of money growth, Calvert said.

This also has the effect of devaluing and weakening the dollar in foreign exchange, which in turn hikes inflation.

Errors Charged To Newhouse

Errors riddle a professional assessment of the Oak Bay fire department, a firefighters' spokesman told municipal council Monday.

Oak Bay Firefighters' Association Local 1856 made the claim in an hour-long response to a management consultant's report which last month recommended the force be cut by four men.

Erskine said 750 hours went into the examination of the G.H. Newhouse and Associates Ltd. study.

Erskine said the Newhouse report used incorrect assumptions, quoted authorities that were not consulted and referred to false statistics.

Mayor Brian Smith also was handed a petition in support of firefighters signed by 4,460 Oak Bay residents.

The brief and petition were referred to council's fire committee for study.

Erskine said the Newhouse report was an unwarranted aftershock of Proposition 13 in California.

"The people of the community have not complained about the cost of fire protection but the politicians are saying the degree of fire protection is not warranted and the costs are excessive."

The report asked whether citizens would notice an appreciable reduction in taxes with a reduced firefighting force, the four-man reduction equivalent to a saving of $4.28 per head of population.

If fire crews are reduced it will mean the attending officer will be actively involved in fighting the fire rather than leadership and direction of the crew, raising the chances for accident, the report concluded.

Nearly 80 per cent of fires in North America are in single and double family dwellings, Erskine said, adding: "Your municipality is full of them."

Erskine said it is not necessary to have manufacturing industries, wharves and oil storage tanks to be concerned about fire losses.

SIDNEY LOOKS AT PARKING

Sidney council Monday approved a study of off-street parking.

The study will determine if the present parking bylaw specifying one parking space for every four restaurant seats and one space for every 400 square feet of sales area is adequate.

The study won't start for five months and is expected to be completed by the end of July next year. Aldermen didn't want the study started until the community plan is completed.

Tourist Business Averted Downturn After Thanksgiving

Victoria's banner tourist season carried strongly through October, avoiding the traditional Thanksgiving Day downturn for the first time in a decade.

Restaurant and bar receipts were about 20 per cent higher than last October and hotel occupancy rates were reported as high as 87 per cent.

Normally hotel occupancy rates are below 50 per cent after Thanksgiving Day.

Good weather and a bonus of about 15 per cent on the American dollar were two major factors, along with strong promotional activities by the provincial department of travel.

Retail trade and the sawmill industry also did well during October, according to a survey by the Canada Employment Centre.

Merchants reported October receipts were much better than last October.

Building supply firms also reported a brisk month, especially for insulation materials and paint.

The continuing strength in the economy created 800 jobs at the local Canada Employment Centre, up 250 from the same month last year.

However, the supply of jobs continues to be much lower than the numbers of people seeking them, local CEC assistant manager Doug Yearwood said.

Victoria is getting an influx of workers from northern B.C. and the Prairies who are fleeing the cold weather and hoping to find work here.

"There is really nothing for them. The economy is fairly strong but not many new jobs are opening up."

Christmas hiring has almost been completed. Department stores in the Victoria area have already lined up most of the people they will need and the post office has stopped accepting applicants for Yule delivery help. There are 2,000 applications on file and not more than 300 will be hired.

While there is no strong growth here, the economy should continue to be stable over the winter, Yearwood said.

Employment will continue to be at a high level in the forest products industry because of strong lumber markets and there is a rush on in the bush to produce enough logs before snow season.

There are signs the tourist season will continue to be fairly strong right through until Christmas.

Provincial government hiring is steady at about 25 Victoria jobs a week, but all on a replacement basis. There is no growth evident in the civil service.

In fact there may be a few layoffs in the federal civil service here as a result of a cutback ordered by Ottawa.

Convicts Reject Prison Switch

By DEREK SIDENIUS
Times Staff

Most American prisoners in Canadian jails and Canadians in U.S. jails have opted to remain where they are rather than be repatriated to complete their sentences under an international prisoner exchange treaty.

Jack Stewart, a spokesman for the Canadian Penitentiary Service in Vancouver, said in an interview today only seven of 35 Americans in B.C. jails have so far taken part in the program.

The seven were transferred to the penitentiary in Kingston in mid-October. From there they were taken to Chicago, the main collection point for U.S. prisoners.

The seven included five inmates from the B.C. Penitentiary in New Westminster and one each from Matsqui and Mountain in the Fraser Valley.

One prisoner was serving 39 years for robbery and wounding and had a release date of 2010 while another was serving life for murder. Two other prisoners were serving seven and 20-year terms for narcotic offences.

One prisoner was doing nine years for robbery and attempted murder, another 20 years for a variety of offences while the seventh was serving five years for robbery.

Stewart said 29 Canadians out of nearly 90 in U.S. jails decided to return to Canada to serve out the remainder of their sentences.

None have yet arrived in B.C.

All of the Canadians came from federal U.S. prisons and state prisons in Texas, one of only two states that have ratified the international treaty to date.

Sting Ads Stung Grace

Viewers who were driven almost to distraction by Sunday night's saturation of the movie The Sting by Western Express ads will be glad that Provincial Secretary Grace McCarthy plans to find out howcum.

The ads were repeated ad nauseam during every commercial break. It got so viewers were recognizing Western winners almost as old friends.

A number of people moaned about the ads to McCarthy and she says she plans to find out how much it cost the Western to run them and why the same plugs were pushed over and over again.

"There was no room at the hotel for a socialist."

With no comparisons intended, Larry Tickner of 589 Nora Place says that was the situation last week when he tried to get into the Socialist International Congress in Vancouver as the official representative for the Socialist Party of Canada.

He said he was refused permission to speak to the congress, escorted out of the hotel and reduced to handing out leaflets in front of the Hyatt Regency hotel where the three-day congress was held.

He said security at the hotel was heavy but in his case "I wouldn't call it security, I would call it censorship."

Tickner said far from being a socialists' conference in the true meaning of the word, it was a rich-man's meeting complete with limousines dropping delegates off at the hotel.

"I bet if Karl Marx had somehow come alive, he wouldn't have been allowed in either."

Last May Victoria's best-known swimming coach loaned a 50-year collection of photos and newspaper clippings to a young man, about 18, who needed help writing a school paper.

Archie McKinnon was doing a favor for a man named George, whose first name he does not know, and of whom he had not heard since the two of them were schoolmates more than 40 years ago.

Always ready and willing to assist a youngster, Archie turned over a bundle of scrapbooks to the lad, expecting them to be returned reasonably soon. But now, six months later, he has heard or seen nothing of them and is asking help in locating the books.

Mr. George said he was trying to give the boy some help in writing a paper about a noted athlete and Archie agreed to tell about his long career teaching at the YMCA and coaching national and Olympic swimmers. The scrapbooks, besides containing much local history, covered many athletic achievements of the last half-century, including the Juan de Fuca Strait swim era when McKinnon coached Marilyn Bell.

The now-retired swim coach neglected to get the boy's name and all efforts to trace George — no relation to ex-mayor Percy George — have failed.

The conviction of her co-workers that Diane Byrne wouldn't stay off work without phoning in to the Registrar of Companies at 940 Blanshard recently led to the rescue of her and six other workers in the new provincial government building at 940 Blanshard.

They became concerned when she didn't show up for work and started a search. They discovered other departments had personnel missing. Somebody remembered hearing the elevator alarm earlier in the morning.

The searchers, unable to find a key, pried open the door of one elevator on the ground floor to find Byrne and the others stuck just below ground level.

They had been there since 8:15 a.m. — almost two hours — after ringing the alarm when the elevator, going to the second floor, began to float backwards.

The alarm was one of those that had been turned off for maintenance work.

Byrne says everybody took the confinement calmly. The only complaint was the heat.

This, in itself, was a bit of a paradox. It wasn't too long ago workers in the new building were complaining about the cold.

But they are not trying to find out which powder with Ingredient X washes whitest.

The exercise is a community survey undertaken by Saanich planning department as part of its community planning process.

Citizen input is the name of the game. Residents will be asked their opinions on such things as development in Saanich, housing types and neighborhood facilities.

Survey organizer Carey Phemister says the interviewers will be calling at about 2,700 households or 10 per cent of the Saanich total over the next five weeks or so. The completed questionnaires will then receive computer analysis.

Testing, Testing Only, Only - Cass

Saanich Ald. Ian Cass was recently seen driving a farm tractor on property at Panama Flats where the Vantreight family is engaged in potato farming — and embroiled in a hassle with Saanich over trespass on municipal land.

But Cass says he was not working for Ald. Geoff Vantreight or his sons, and definitely not party to any violation of municipal bylaws.

Cass, who had a tractor equipment company before he entered local politics, said his council colleague wanted him to pass an opinion on a new tractor Vantreight was considering buying.

"I went over there and tried it out. I must have been there at least half an hour," Cass told Town Talk.

CAMBRIDGE, England — The Sex Pistols punk rock group is planning to make a record about its guitarist Sid Vicious to help pay the costs of his defence on a murder charge.

Winnipeg Girl Miss Canada

TORONTO — Heidi Quiring of Winnipeg (right), crowned Miss Canada on Monday night, has positive thoughts about the beauty pageant and what it means to her future.

The 20-year-old Miss Manitoba contestant said winning the contest is more than just a stepping-stone to her future career — it's "a whole mountain."

Miss Quiring said the year will be a boost to her goal of being a television broadcaster or an interpreter because of the contacts she expects to make.

Asked if she felt at odds with feminists who deplore beauty contests, she said women today know who they are and what they are capable of doing. Those who do not like beauty contests can ignore them, she said.

She said she has travelled across Canada several times, "which is a very large part of what I am now," and added she is excited about prospective travels to Europe, the Caribbean, and the Middle East.

A third-year language student at the University of Winnipeg, she said she intends to continue her studies.

She chose education as the topic she wanted to express herself on, and spoke in both French and English. She also speaks German and wants to be an interpreter and a television broadcaster.

Johanne Turenne, who as first runner-up is in line for the crown if Miss Quiring cannot continue her duties as Miss Canada, works as a secretary, but her goal is to be a child-case worker or a fashion co-ordinator. Miss Turenne, 18, is from Duberger, Que., and was represented Quebec City in the pageant.

The third runner-up was Miss Toronto, 18-year-old Carol McCartney. A Grade 13 student, Miss McCartney wants to be an elementary school teacher.

She has taken modelling, piano and vocal lessons, and chose to speak about music as a mode of communication because, she said, all the other finalists would speak on education.

No Hug from Anne. . .

OSLO — Princess Anne was accused by Norwegian newspapers Monday of snubbing a sick child who wanted her to hug him in a hospital ward.

Television viewers telephoned the papers to complain about the princess's behavior while she was visiting the children's ward at Oslo's National Hospital.

The Queen's daughter, who is president of the Save the Children Fund, was reported to have ignored a five-year-old boy named Oyvind who said to her "Hello, Anne" and stretched out his arms for a hug.

Flynt's Sex Shop Aide Shooting Victim

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — A vice-president of a company connected with the publishing empire of Larry Flynt was shot from ambush Monday night, deputies said, eight months to the day that Flynt was shot from ambush and left paralysed in Georgia.

Walter William Abrams, 33, was shot once in the chest, said sheriff's deputies. He was listed in guarded condition in hospital early today.

Jimmy Flynt is president of the company, which deals in sex paraphernalia. Deputies discounted a suggestion that the shots which struck Abrams may have been meant for Flynt.

Larry Flynt, owner of Hustler magazine and other publications, was shot March 6 in Lawrenceville, Ga., during a recess in an obscenity trial in which he was the defendant.

29 Years In a Dungeon For Teenage Affair

LAMIA, Greece (AP) — A 47-year old Greek woman was held captive for 29 years in a basement dungeon because her family was scandalized by a love affair she had when she was a teenager, police said today.

The discovery was made after one of the villagers could no longer bear the woman's screams and decided to speak, police said.

Police said local authorities are being investigated because they knew of the captivity but pledged themselves to secrecy for the family's sake.

The woman, Helen Karioti, was taken to hospital suffering from malnutrition, anemia, partial mental derangement and other ailments, police said.

Her brother and two sisters, who kept her captive, were arrested and charged with illegal detention.

They testified that Miss Karioti was kept in the dungeon on their parents' orders because she had an affair with another teen-ager. The parents died two years ago.

"Because of the scandal in the village and the family dishonor, our parents decided to lock her up," said the oldest brother, Efthimios, 59.

Golda's Visits Cut

JERUSALEM (UPI) — Doctors have restricted all visits by public figures to the bedside of former Prime Minister Golda Meir, doctors said today.

A local news agency said the visits were curtailed at the request of Mrs. Meir and her physician.

An intern in the hematology ward where Mrs. Meir is being treated by a blood specialist refused to disclose Mrs. Meir's illness.

Doctors said she is receiving treatment for a viral infection and pains in her back and have denied rumors Mrs. Meir is suffering from advanced leukemia.

Her doctors reported minor improvement in her condition Monday, although there has been little change since she was hospitalized 10 days ago, the reports said.

Many Israeli leaders tried to visit the 80-year-old former leader in Hadassah Hospital during the last few days but have not been allowed into her room, a hospital spokesman said.

Members of her family are visiting her and keeping her up to date on the latest political developments.

Saturday Night Fever. . . 'Just Sick!'

MOSCOW (AP) — A Kremlin journalist has denounced New York discos as havens of decadence and loneliness where dancers snort cocaine in the bathrooms and "spend a whole night shaking with the lights and dreaming of fame, success and money."

Young people in the United States are stupefied by these distractions, a sort of "nirvana for lonely people who don't want to have contact with anyone and who couldn't anyway," Genrikh Borovic of the official Soviet news agency Tass wrote in the Literary Gazette.

"How many lonely people are there in America? Very many!" Borovic said. "In any case the numbers are sufficient that in two years' time the multi-billion-dollar disco industry founded on loneliness has spread rapidly through the country."

Studio 54 was quite an eyeful for Borovic.

Calling it "the most famous discotheque in New York," Borovic ridiculed the huge crowds waiting anxiously outside hoping to be noticed in their "outrageous clothes" or let in to dance.

Only a privileged few can enter, the journalist said. "Long black limousines with tinted windshields pull up and the golden fishes of both sexes come out and go serenly through the doors."

Borovic did have praise for the "first-class" audio system that cost $300,000, and the electronic lighting effects synchronized with the music.

But the lounges were a different matter.

"In the men's toilet on the second floor a man in a bright red velvet smoking jacket was attentively looking at his features in the mirror," Borovic wrote. "Unhurriedly he poured out of a yellow box a pinch of white powder, placed it on his thumbnail and snorted it. Everything was done calmly, without any hurrying, without looking at any doorways, very openly, in front of everyone."

The best service in the game.

There are two things you can always count on when you rent an Avis car: fast efficient service at our counters, and a clean, reliable car.

We've made checking out and checking in as smooth and trouble-free as possible, because we know how important that is to you. We call our approach "counter intelligence."

And we've made a reputation for Avis cars as the cleanest in the business, because we know that's important to you, too.

We check and clean all cars thoroughly and regularly, and even leave the check-list inside so you can see what we've done.

Good service is more strongly associated with the Avis name than anyone else in the car rental business. And it didn't just happen. It's one more way we try harder.

Reed Paper

Reed Paper Ltd. of Toronto reported the first profitable quarter for the financially-troubled company in two years.

D. A. MacIver, president and chief executive officer, said in a report to shareholders the company would not declare its usual January dividend until a substantial improvement had been made in its financial position.

The level of debt must be reduced significantly and the profit-earning ability increased "before complete financial stability can be achieved."

For the third quarter, Reed showed a profit of $3.3 million or 13 cents a share compared with a loss of $6.1 million or 35 cents a share for the same period last year.

However, for the first nine months, Reed continued to run a deficit, recording a loss of $3.4 million or 28 cents a share compared with a loss of $9.6 million or 60 cents a share for the same period in 1977.

N. Telecom

Northern Telecom Ltd. reports net earnings of $77.-million, or $2.77 a share, for the first nine months of 1978, up from $63.9-million, or $2.41 a share, earned during the same period last year.

Total sales for the period were $1.055 million, compared with $947 million the previous year.

Northern Telecom, Canada's largest telecommunications equipment manufacturer, said the gains resulted "principally" from a reduction in income taxes arising from the use of a subsidiary's tax losses incurred in prior years.

Third quarter earnings were $29 million, or 98 cents a share, on sales of $378.9 million, compared with $18.8 million, or 71 cents a share, on sales of $297.3 million in the same period in 1977.

Cyprus Anvil

Cyprus Anvil Mining Corporation reported a loss of $632,000, or eight cents a share, for the nine months ending Sept. 30, compared with a restated profit of $3,063,000, or 40 cents a share, for the same period last year.

Revenue was $82,281,000, compared with $84,029,000.

"The loss was mainly due to low lead and zinc prices in the first half of the year," a company spokesman said.

Gulf Cda.

Gulf Canada Ltd. reports net earnings for the first nine months of 1978 of $120 million or $2.64 a share compared with $127 million or $2.80 a share for the corresponding period last year.

Despite reduced demand for crude oil and natural gas, the company's natural resource earnings improved due to higher prices. But the company said earnings from refined products continued to decline due to oversupply and severe price competition in Eastern Canada.

Capital and exploration expenditures totalled $368 million for the first three-quarters of 1978, compared with $330 million during the same period last year.

Con.Bathurst

Consolidated-Bathurst Ltd. announced shareholders have approved a three-for-one stock split of common shares and an increase in preferred shares to six millions from 3.1 million.

Company president William Turner said in an statement shareholders have also authorized a name change to Consolidated-Bathurst Inc.

All changes are expected to be effective by November 23 pending the approval of one group of preferred shareholders who are not scheduled to meet until Nov. 16.

SEAMEN BACK FOR $155,000

NORTH VANCOUVER (CP) — A group of 27 Filipino seamen who went on strike for higher pay returned to work Monday after receiving a total of $155,000 in American currency from the shipowners, a business agent for a Canadian union representing the sailors said.

Tom McGrath, of the Canadian Brotherhood of Railway, Transport and General Workers, said the amount is the difference between pay rates set by the Magsaysay Shipping Co. of Manila, which operates the Monrovian-registered ship Grace River, and those established by the International Transport Worker's Federation (ITWF) of London.

The Phillipines government earlier warned the seaman their strike was illegal and that they would face legal action when they returned home. The National Seaman's Board in Manila warned the strikers any agreement obtained under duress would be considered invalid.

Suspensions Excessive

The B.C. Labor Relations Board (LRB) ruled Monday the three-day suspensions handed down to 26 workers on the provincial Queen of Coquitlam ferry last summer were excessive.

The Marine Workers Union represented the 26 workers, who walked off the job July 17, after the suspensions were issued. Robert Peacock, a union executive member at the Horseshoe Bay terminal in West Vancouver, was given a three-month suspension and a transfer.

The LRB said the walkout was illegal, but reduced the suspensions to two days. The board also said the discrepancies in testimony in Peacock's case were so major that a later hearing will be called.

Ninth Escape

BURNABY (CP) — Teresa Brewer is getting as regular as the changing of the guard at the Lower Mainland Regional Correctional Centre (Oakalla).

The 21-year-old prisoner, serving a two-year sentence for robbery, escaped for the ninth time in a year from the minimum security institution Saturday.

She was still at large Monday.

Crash Pilot AWOL?

FERNIE (CP) — A Fort Lewis, Wash., soldier has been listed as absent without leave following the crash of his light plane in southeastern British Columbia, officials said. The single-engined Cessna 172 was found empty after the Saturday-night crash just north of the Montana-British Columbia border.

Guilty on Heroin

VANCOUVER (CP) — Joe Way Chan, 46, of Vancouver and King Lui, 46, a restaurant manager from Hong Kong, pleaded guilty Monday in provincial court to charges of conspiracy to traffic in heroin between June and December, 1975. The Co-ordinated Law Enforcement Unit laid the charges after a 18-month investigation in Europe, Japan, Australia, Thailand and Hong Kong.

10 Suspects

MAPLE RIDGE (CP) — RCMP say they have less than 10 suspects in the murder of a 16-year-old girl whose partially-clad body was found Oct. 15 in a field here. Police said they have narrowed the list of suspects in the death of Catherine Pozzobon after interviewing 160 youths. She had attended a party in the area the night before her death.

Suicide Threat

VANCOUVER (CP) — Richard Charles Bramble, 21, of Vancouver, was charged Monday with possession of a dangerous weapon after a man threatened to shoot himself before he was coaxed out of an east end house by police. The four-hour incident ended peacefully.

No Strike Paper Ads, Employer Group Urges

VANCOUVER (CP) — The president of the Employers Council of British Columbia said Monday his organization will advise its members that it does not support the policy of advertising in The Express, a newspaper being produced by workers on strike and locked out at the city's two daily newspapers.

"It is our view that management should not go out of its way to assist people on strike in prolonging that strike by assisting in providing new sources of income," said Bill Hamilton.

"We would not support the policy of advertising in The Express, but I'm sure some (of our members) will."

The Express is being produced by members of six unions involved in a labor dispute at Pacific Press Ltd., which produces the morning Province and evening Sun.

The paper is printed by striking pressmen using facilities rented from Craftsmen Printers, a divison of the Columbian company which publishes The Columbian.

The thrice-weekly Express published its first issue last Friday, less than 48 hours after the strike-lockout started.

Its Monday issue carried a quarter-page advertisement co-signed by Sun publisher Clark Davey and Province publisher Paddy Sherman, explaining management's position in an attempt to reduce the number of pressmen, one of the main issues in the dispute.

Columbian publisher Rikk Taylor said last week that Hamilton had called him and the telephone conversation "sounded like some kind of intimidation for Craftsmen Printers not to print."

Hamilton denied that charge, saying that he was only seeking information for a council publication that includes information on local labor disputes.

"We're not delighted to see the printers prolonging the strike by offering the strikers a chance to make more income," he said. "But that's only our opinion."

He said that opinion will probably be made known to members this week. He said the council represents about 85 employers and 25 trade associations which represent the majority of employees in B.C.

Pacific Press, he said, is not a member but participates in information exchanges and informal sessions at which both members and non-members review legislation and discuss committee reports on various subjects relevant to employers.

About 1,400 workers at Pacific Press have been on strike or locked out since Nov. 1 and no further talks are planned. Their last contract expired Oct. 31.

Collection Moved

Healing Substance; Shrinks Piles

Exclusive healing substance proven to shrink hemorrhoids and repair damaged tissue.

A renowned research institute has found a unique healing substance with the ability to shrink hemorrhoids painlessly. It relieves itching and discomfort in minutes and speeds up healing of the injured, inflamed tissue.

In case after case, while gently relieving pain, actual reduction (shrinkage) took place.

Most important of all—results were so thorough that this improvement was maintained over a period of many months.

All this was accomplished with a healing substance (Bio-Dyne) which quickly helps heal injured cells and stimulates growth of new tissue.

Now Bio-Dyne is offered in ointment and suppository form called Preparation H. Ask for it at all drug stores. Satisfaction or your money refunded.

VANCOUVER (CP) — The British Columbia Supreme Court Monday awarded $45,000 to a 26-year-old Vancouver man for the loss of his leg in a local traffic accident in 1976.

The court also found that Murray Dennis Hunt, who was riding a motorcycle, shared equal liability for the accident with Roy Milton Bartholomew, driver of the second vehicle involved.

CAHA Demands Cash Before Backing Series

OTTAWA (CP) — An international hockey series remained in doubt Monday despite an effort Monday by Iona Campagnolo, federal minister responsible for sport, to mediate a dispute between the World Hockey Association and the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association.

The series, involving Canadian WHA teams and top European teams, and is scheduled for January and February. But the WHA and the CAHA have yet to agree on how much the CAHA is to be paid for juniors who signed professional contracts this fall.

Mrs. Campagnolo met officials from the WHA, CAHA, Hockey Canada and Canadian Major Junior Hockey League behind closed doors to try to reach an agreement.

The CMJHL is an umbrella organization representing the Ontario, and Quebec major junior leagues and the Western Canada junior league. The three Canadian WHA teams are Quebec Nordiques, Winnipeg Jets and Edmonton Oilers.

Following the meeting all parties agreed that progress had been made but no further comment could be elicited.

The CAHA has repeatedly threatened to use its seat on the International Ice Hockey Federation (IIHF) council to have the series cancelled if the WHA does not agree to compensate junior team owners for the players.

But David Branch, CAHA executve director, said the national organization cannot afford to wait much longer.

Branch said the CAHA has until "sometime later this month" to notify the IIHF, the world governing body, whether the WHA is in good standing with it.

The nine junior players who jumped to the professional league have been suspended by the major junior league. The WHA is not considered to be in good standing with the CAHA as long as the teams use the players without paying development fees, Branch said.

"We will not back down, " he said. "The WHA must forfeit a $150,000 bond—put up last year by the league as a guarantee against signing juniors—and pay $40,000 in development fees for each player."

Two junior owners recently filed law suits in Ontario's Supreme Court against several junior players, Birmingham Bulls, controlled by Toronto businessman John Bassett and player agent Alan Eagleson, also of Toronto, over breach of contract.

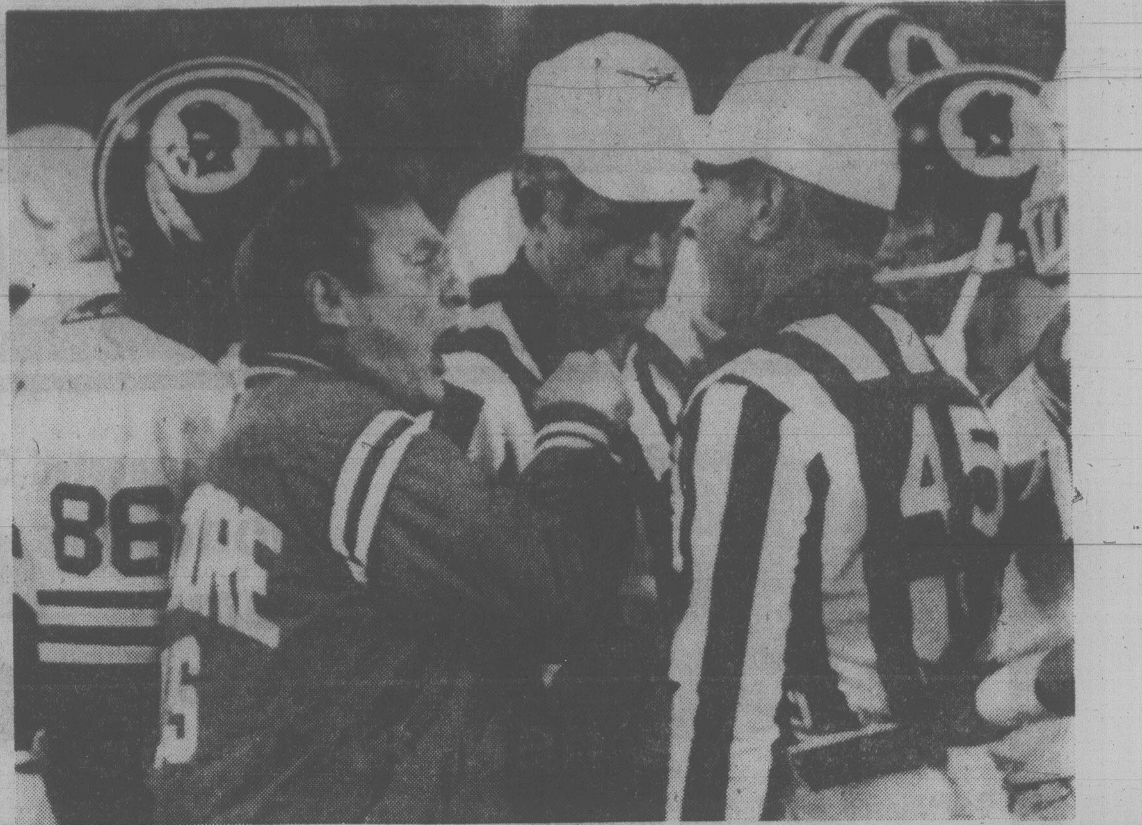
Hockey Canada, which handles international events, wanted the issue surrounding the validity of the junior contract pursued through the court. It disagreed with cancelling the series.

Indianapolis Racers owner Nelson Skalbania incensed junior owners and the CAHA last week by selling 17-year-old sensation Wayne Gretzky and two others to Edmonton Oilers for $850,000.

Skalbania was also quoted as saying he intended to recruit 10 more juniors this season.

Gretzky, who starred with last season with Sault Ste. Marie Greyhounds of the Ontario Major Junior League, is believed to have signed a $1.75 millon personal services contract with Skalbania.

"He hasn't even been paid for yet and he's being sold for a bundle," Branch said.



WINNING BATTLE is launched by Baltimore coach Ted Marchibroda as he argues with officials after controversial play involving Washington receiver Danny Buggs during third quarter of National Football League game Monday. Officials first ruled that Buggs made pass reception in bounds, but reversed call after protest by Marchibroda, who watched his Colts come from behind for 21-17 victory over Redskins.

Hope Is Name of Game For Sandown Secretary

By BILL WALKER
Times Staff

Racing secretary Aubrey Davies probably put it best when he said:

"Racing is a game of hope, eh? You hope you can pick a winner; then you hope you can get even; and we hope we can fill the cards."

It was a brief commentary of what goes on at a race track, in this case, Sandown, and apropos to the situation.

Davies was admitting what everyone knows — that, besides a downplay in the mutuel handle this year, last Friday's downpour did little to help the horse situation at Sandown as the meeting goes into its 13th day Wednesday.

A lot of the horses got "run down" (at the heels) he explained and any more rain won't help matters at all."

The three weekend cards, Friday, Monday and Wednesday, will tax the horse situation to its utmost, but Davies said, we should be okay, if we get any break at all in the weather."

As it was Monday, there were some interesting highlights.

There was the first dead heat of the meeting, a second victory by jockette Pat Owen and a victory (maybe a final one) by a veteran campaigner, and an apprentice rider lost his "bug".

The dead heat occurred in the first race between Bender's Biggest, the outsider, and Blue Sabre, the favorite. The pair raced virtually as a team down the stretch and the camera couldn't separate them. Blue Sabre returned $3.50 and Bender's Biggest $13.10. The quinella was worth $37.60.

The second feature came in the very next race when Owen, who had scored her maiden win here earlier on Major Return, rated the three-year-old chestnut filly Our Neelie perfectly to score over the fast-closing Sassy Dee to return $14.20 on the front end. The quinella in that one was $115.40, the best of the day.

Two races later, the nine-year-old chestnut gelding Moon Golfer, who had made only one previous start this season, got a well-rated ride from Meno Mena to score a neck decision over Local Boy. A few years ago Moon Golfer was one of the premier speedsters at Exhibition Park. Moon Golfer paid $9.70.

For Mena, it was his 40th winner and his last ride as an apprentice.

Oh, yes, and in between the second and fourth races, there was a happy moment for the Capital City Turf Club president, George Harknett, who has a trying time otherwise this fall.

His four-year old bay gelding Devil Darren ($7.90) scored his first victory of the year and George and Devil Darren got their picture taken for the first time at the meeting.

The bay gelding Top Sport, owned by the Big J Stable and ridden by Travis Wilkinson, got the best of Fraser McColl's Vicalino in the featured seventh over 6½ furlongs by coming from the pace to score a handy win and return $5.70. In an earlier meeting Vicalino had made every post a winner, but this time Wilkinson forced the pace all the way. It was Wilkinson's 17th victory and put him in a tie for the riding lead with Mark Walker who booked off most of his mounts Monday.

Otherwise, nominations were posted for Saturday's running of the Vancouver Island championship, a $4,000 added affair over a mile and 1/16, for three-year-olds and up. And there are two three-year-olds, Reformed and Lyric Line, nominated. The others are Saucy Verdict, winner of both the Colonist and Times Handicaps, Kimbob, Fleet Avalanza, Polatouche, Teddy Bear D, Blue Major, Forty Jewels and Paca.

It was also revealed that Woodland Shadow, the fine three-year-old who finished sixth in Saturday's derby after being heavily favored to win, may have suffered a broken bone in his left front foot in the running of the race. This would account for the fact that Woodland Shadow faded somewhat after setting the pace most of the way. The injury is not believed serious enough to have ended his career.

Peggy Princess was reclaimed out of the eighth race by Ron King, who had lost Peggy Princess by a claim to Peter Gregory at Ex-Park earlier. Clint Wilson took Weedonal out of the same race.

SHOULDER INJURY OUSTS O.J.

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — O.J. Simpson will miss at least three games and possibly the rest of the National Football League season because of a shoulder separation, a team doctor for San Francisco 49ers said Monday.

Simpson, second leading rusher in NFL history, was injured in the second quarter of Sunday's game against Atlanta Falcons, who beat the 49ers, 21-10.

Propp Leader In WHL Race

When Billings Bighorns entered the Western Hockey League in the 1977-78 season and advanced to the league final against New Westminster Bruins, many hockey people felt it was a fluke Billings got as far as it did.

This year, the Bighorns are out to prove they have a strong team and so far, there is no question.

Bighorns are sporting the second best record in the 12-team league and have opened up a four-point lead in the Central Division standings.

The Bighorns are undefeated at home in six games and have outscored their opponents, 54-11.

The Wheat Kings are undefeated in 16 games and boast a record of 15 wins and one tie.

Linemate Ray Allison is four points back, but Allison has 34 assists, tops in the league.

Rick Knickle of Brandon leads goaltenders with a 2.63 goals-against average. Clubmate Scott Olson is second with a 3.00 average and Andy Moog of Billings is third with 3.14.

HILLTOPS ROUT LIONS

SASKATOON (CP) — Reg Boudreau was a one-man wrecking crew Sunday as he led Saskatoon Hilltops to a 64-0 rout over Fort Garry Lions in the Western Canada junior football final.

Boudreau scored four touchdowns, kicked three converts and added a single.

Jones Boy Makes All the Difference

BALTIMORE (AP) — Bert Jones is an intensive, take-charge individual who found it hard adjusting to the inactivity which resulted after he injured his right shoulder in a pre-season game.

The 27-year-old quarterback was reinjured Monday night but still managed to throw three touchdown passes to lead Baltimore Colts to a 21-17 upset victory over Washington Redskins.

Making only his second start of the season after hurting his shoulder in the final exhibition game, Jones rifled a game-winning, 27-yard scoring pass to Roger Carr with 3:08 remaining in the National Football League contest.

Jones had gone to the sidelines after being pulled down by three Redskins during the third period, but he returned, in obvious pain, to rally the Colts to victory.

"It hurt, but I wanted to go back in," Jones said, gingerly holding his right arm close to his body after emerging from a post-game whirlpool massage.

The quarterback said he was reinserted into the game after the team doctor assured coach Ted Marchibroda that any further contact would not produce an incapacitating injury.

"I really kind of forgot about it," said Jones, who connected for six of his 10 completions following the injury. "But it's a little sore right now."

Members of both teams said the return of Jones, with Baltimore trailing 17-14, had provided the emotional spark that produced the victory.

"They were an inspired team," said coach Jack Pardee, whose Redskins maintained their one-game lead over Dallas Cowboys in the National Conference's East Division with a 7-3 record. "Bert Jones coming back the way he did had to give them a big, big boost."

Washington quarterback Joe Theismann, who replaced an ineffective Billy Kilmer and directed the Redskins into the lead late in the third quarter, also gave credit to Jones.

"It had to be a big hype for them," he said.

Defensive tackle Dave Rowe of the Colts said of Jones: "Everybody knew he was hurt, you could see the pain on his face. Everybody just played that much harder."

The Redskins, who have lost 15 of 19 games in the lifetime series against Baltimore, moved to the Colts' 39 in the final minute before three incompletions by Theismann and a sack by defensive tackle Joe Ehrmann ended their comeback hopes.

Four Inducted In Football Hall

HAMILTON (CP) — They were four of what would commonly be referred to as the unsung heroes of Canadian professional football.

One was an anonymous, but very important behind-the-scenes organizer. One was a referee more booed than ballyhooed. The other two were men who toiled in the trenches.

However, all were indeed worthy inductees to the Canadian Football Hall of Fame.

"And there is nothing closer to immortality than to be inducted to the Hall of Fame," board of management chairman Reg Wheeler told the 6th annual Canadian Football Hall of Fame dinner Sunday night.

Thus, the late Harry McBrien, Paul Dojack, Kaye Vaughn and Ron Atchison took their places alongside the other 94 builders and players who have previously been installed in the Hall.

"I've been here maybe 30 times in the past to play. Tonight, I'm going to leave this town feeling 1,000 times better than I ever have before," said Vaughn, who won all-star recognition 10 times and top lineman awards twice during his 12 seasons as a lineman with Ottawa Rough Riders.

Atchison toiled 17 years as a lineman for Saskatchewan Roughriders.

Paul Dojack of Regina, who toiled 23 years as a CFL referee, admitted he wasn't a superstar, hero, saint or angel. "But officials are a necessary evil," he said.

"There was not a park in Canada where he wasn't booed," Atchison said of Dojack.

McBrien, who toiled 25 years as a referee, 10 as secretary of the Canadian Rugby Union and 10 more as Grey Cup co-ordinator, achieved a rare double in Canadian sport with his posthumous induction. He had been inducted to the Canadian Sports Hall of Fame earlier this year.

Canadians Happy

NEW YORK (CP) — Members of Canada's equestrian team were in an enthusiastic mood Monday as they headed for the Royal Winter Fair in Toronto after finishing the National Horse Show here with successive victories.

John Simpson of Cochrane, Alta., won the Grand Prix of New York Sunday night at Madison Square Garden to give the Canadians their third win of the six-day show. Saturday, Ian Millar of Perth, Ont., took the evening's jump on Brother Sam for his second triumph of the week.

In the last event Sunday, Terrence (Torchy) Miller of Toronto finished in third place on Edenvale and Mikllar was fifth, again with Brother Sam.

"It could only have been better if they had been one, two, three," said Tom Gayford, the former Canadian equestrian star who now is chef d'equipe for the Canadian team.

Simpson's win came in a thrilling jump-off against six other riders. He rode his registered quarter horse, Texas, to a clear round in 36.3 seconds. That was three seconds faster than the time set by Melanie Smith of the U.S., who had been leading aboard Val de Loire.

"He was jumping super," Simpson said of Texas. "He's been good all week and I thought he was getting a little tired, but tonight when I got on him he was ready to rock and roll."

New Golf Techniques Boost Dale's Chances

The new and most obvious change in Dale Shaw is an attractive haircut. Not as obvious, but also new is an upright golf swing and new putting style that could make the 1979 Ladies Professional Golf Association tour a more interesting one for the campaigner from Victoria.

It's not that the 1978 season was a poor one for the former Victoria women's champion. Although her official earnings for the year are just under $4,000, Dale Shaw regards her first full campaign as a professional tournament player "was a very good one."

For the record, she made the cut in 21 of 27 tournaments entered and has a modest "in-the-money" streak that started after a late-summer miss in Detroit.

Home for a winter vacation, Western Canada's only representative on the LPGA tour will leave at the end of the month to start preparations for the 1979 campaign.

"I spent more than I made," she said, "but it was a good year for me. I made the changes in my swing and putting style. It took a while, but I felt there ws a great improvement in my game.

"Last year, my average round was between 75 and 78. This year the average went into the low 70s. I had a couple of 69s, after the changes. Last year, I had a good round with two birdies. This year I've been averaging four or five a round.

"It has been very statisfying and I've learned a great deal. Instead of worrying about bogeys, for example, I've worked harder on getting birdies. The over-par scores are starting to disappear from my scorecards."

The improvements, she said Monday, are due in part to lessons from Lew Worsham and Richard Loughlin. Worsham, a former U.S. Open champion who "sort of adopted" Dale because of her friendship with his daughter, has concentrated his attention on grip, stance, sand shots and tournament thinking. Loughlin, a Long Island pro, changed Shaw's putting style and swing.

"You know me," she laughed, "as an amateur, when wasn't I changing my swing? I developed a loop and then the low swing. I had a chronic draw, and you can't play tournament golf that way. You have to hit the fade."

The new swing has added some extra distance to her driving ("I'm not the longest on tour, but nor am I the shortest"). More important, Dale feels she has learned how to get better positioning with her drives and long irons with the controlable fade.

For Dale, the drastic change has been in putting. Because of Loughlin, she has forsaken the wrist stroke she has used for most of her golfing career for the "pendulum" swing.

"First tried it in Detroit and that's when I didn't make the cut. But now that I've worked on it, I think my putting has improved greatly. The big thing I learned on tour is that weight is not nearly as important as line. I'm always on line and now that accuracy has started to creep into my chipping."

And about putting and chipping, Dale feels the tour has destroyed one myth she held about men versus women: "I always heard that the one area in golf in which women were equal to men was in putting and chipping. Don't you believe it.

"At least that was the thinking until Nancy Lopez came along to show them it (sinking 20-footers) can be done. She's a magnificent putter . . ."

Tournament golf also has altered Dale's thinking about consistency: "Last year I was rather consistent in the 75-78 range . . . and didn't make much money. This year I had some scores in the 80s — after I made those changes — but I also had a couple of 69s and quite a number in the very low 70s. More tour players would prefer to have one lousy tournament and one astounding good one. You wind up with more cheques that way."

And cheques are something the hometown golfers are hoping will come her way in 1979.

Three Refs, New Rule Opens Up Play In NBA

NEW YORK (AP) — Commissioner Larry O'Brien is convinced the move to three referees and enforcement of the prohibition on hand checking has had positive effects on play in the National Basketball Association this season.

"We find that excessive roughness has declined sharply and the game has opened up," said O'Brien, who authorized a preliminary evaluation of those two major changes based on the first 100 games of the season. "Unquestionably, the changes are working out better than we could ever have anticipated this early in the season."

When the changes were announced at a meeting last June of the league's board of governors, it was feared the presence of an extra official, combined with tighter restrictions on defensive tactics, would turn the NBA game into a parade of fouls. Games would drag on and on as players marched from foul line to foul line—the essence of the sport as a ballet of constant motion would be lost.

Those fears have not been realized, a study made for the NBA by the Elias Sports Bureau and released this week would appear to show.

In the first 100 games of the 902-game regular season, an average total of 54.9 fouls were called on the two teams. That's an increase of just one foul per game from last year's average of 53.9. And the length of games has increased by only one minute to an average of two hours, five minutes, from last year's 2:04.

Scoring has risen, by about 10 points per game. That may reflect the edge given to offensive players by the ban on hand checking. But free throws have accounted for 20.7 per cent of all points scored this season—the exact same percentage as last year.

The changes are not without their critics. Several coaches have complained that under the three-referee system, the most experienced official works the mid-court area and does not get a clear view of the action under the basket, where most off-the-ball fouls occur.

Others, including New York's Willis Reed and Los Angeles' Jerry West, say the no-hand checking rule is only a step in the right direction and have called for even stricter prohibitons against incidental contact.

Still others have their doubts about the three-referee setup because they feel the league does not have enough competent officials to fill out the required number of three-man crews.

By the same token, others argue the extra official has made each referee's job that much easier by reducing their areas of responsibility. Three men can cover the court better than two, they say.

IPSWICH, England (AP) — Ipswich Town soccer player Eric Gates has walked out on the English Cup holder after being unable to hold a starting berth.

Techs Top Trilecs

Ivy's tripped Victoria Athletics 86-69 and Techline Copy Centre defeated Trilec Installations 67-57 in Victoria Senior "B" Men's Basketball League play Monday at Victoria High School.

Grant Boland scored 12 of his 16 points in the second half to lead the Ivy's attack while John Alberson added 14 and Brian Sutherland-Brown accounted for 13. Jim MacKay (18) and Duff McCaghey (15) were the top Athletic marksmen.

Al Olsen and Ken Weins scored 13 and 10 points, respectively, to spark Techline. Darrell Johnson (14) and Rick Jeffries (13) set the pace for Trilec.

Trios Toppled

Juan de Fuca Gulls held period leads of 3-2 and 4-3 en route to a 5-3 decision over Oak Bay Trios in a South Vancouver Island Junior "B" Hockey League game Monday at Juan de Fuca Arena.

Victory moved the Gulls into a tie for third place with Fuller Lake Flyers and left Trios in fifth spot.

SKILLINGS LOSES FINAL TO EBERTS

KAMLOOPS — Tony Eberts of Kamloops scored three in the third end Monday and went on to post an 8-5 win over Steve Skillings of Victoria in the final of a $25,000 curling bonspiel.

Eberts' rink of Garnet Campbell, Donn Perkins and Norm Hellyer collected $10,000 dollars for the win.

Skillings, Murray Walker, Rob Cummings and Kim Browning earned $5,000.

The Victoria rink came out of the "C" event and downed Brent Giles of North Vancouver 7-5 and Al Richards of Burnaby 5-4 in earlier Monday draws to qualify for the final.

Eberts qualified by edging Frank Bailey of Calgary 6-5 and downing Glen Pierce of Burnaby, 13-4.

Leafs Trip Bucks

Esquimalt Maple Leafs toppled first-place Western Homes Buckaroos 5-2 Monday in a South Island Big Six Intermediate Hockey League game at Memorial Arena.

Dale Cook, Randy Krantz, Chris Riddell, Rob Coldwell and Art Webster counted for Leafs, who scored three goals in the second period to take a 4-2 advantage into the final frame.

Nancy Leads Way To Pairs Triumph

KAWASAKI, Japan (AP) — Nancy Lopez and Mexico's Ernesto Acosta defeated second-round leaders Isao Aoki and Hisako Higuchi of Japan by three strokes in an eight-team, mixed-pairs golf tournament today.

Lopez and Acosta, representing Mexico although Lopez is from Albuquerque, N.M., had a total of 274, 14 under par, and collected $25,000 first prize money.

The Japanese pair earned $16,000 for the event in which partners hit alternate shots during the first round, counted their better ball on each hole in the second round and each tallied an individual score in today's round.

In third place was the American team of Arnold Palmer and Laura Baugh with 279 total. Canadians Sandra Post and Jim Nelford were fourth at 280, followed by Australians David Graham and Jan Stephenson with 282.

Next were Taiwan's Hsieh Min-nan and Cu Ai-Yu with 284. New Zealand's Bob Charles and Marlene J. Smith were seventh with a 288 total. Tony Jacklin and Michelle Walker of England were eighth with 292.

STELLY'S IN SEMIS

Stelly's captured the final semi-final berth in the second division of the Greater Victoria High School Soccer League by tripping Esquimalt Dockers 6-3 Monday at Oak Bay High School.

Dixie Win For Donnie

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Donnie Allison was officially declared the winner today of the disputed Dixie 500 Grand National stock car race held Sunday at Atlanta International Raceway.

Officials of the National Association for Stock Car Auto Racing rechecked scorecards before making the decision that Allison won, Richard Petty finished second and Dave Marcis was third.

Petty thought he won when he inched ahead of Marcis at the finish line. Two hours following the race, Allison and then Petty and then Allison again was designated unofficial winner.

The controversy arose over whether Allison drove one more lap than he was credited for by scorers.

Cale Yarborough, who had already clinched a third straight Grand National championship, finished ninth at Atlanta and ran his point total to 4,666.

Musical Gathering

University of Victoria's Division of Art and Music Education plays host this week to the 1978 fall conference of B.C. music educators.

New facilities in the music wing together with the lecture auditorium, Room 144, and foyer of the adjoining MacLaurin Building, provide the setting for clinics and demonstrations. The agenda will occupy B.C.schools' music instructors Friday and Saturday.

Co-operating in hosting the annual event are the music teachers of School Districts 61, 62 and 63.

The conference, operating under the general title, Capital Sounds, has organized sessions in five major streams — band sessions, choral, elementary general music, Kodaly and string sessions.

Besides a number of highly qualified visiting clinicians, several local experts in various fields are taking part, including Ted Ireton (bands), Lorna Griffiths (choral); Ian and Pat Bradley, Bonnie Smith, Jim Kirk (elementary general music); Connie More, Marge Littley (Kodaly) and Rocky Whittaker (strings).

A concert will conclude the proceedings Saturday at 8 p.m. in the University Centre Auditorium. Participating will be the Victoria and District Honor Band, guest conducted by Dr. Alan Drake, chairman of the department of music and division of fine arts and director of bands at Ohio Northern University.

Also taking part will be the Pacific Wind Quintet, resident faculty ensemble at the University of Victoria, the Carson-Graham Jazz Choir with trumpeter Bobby Shew of Los Angeles and solo timpanist Charles Dowd of the Eugene Symphony Orchestra. Both artists are clinicians at the conference.

Before The Judge

An 18-year-old driver was charged in provincial court Monday with two counts of criminal negligence, one causing the death of a 17-year-old passenger.

Wayne Anthony Roos, 88 Wellington, was charged with criminal negligence causing the death of Kevin Lee Skailes, 1671 Amphion, and criminal negligence in the operation of a motor vehicle.

Skailes died Wednesday afternoon when a sports car apparently went out of control in the 1700-block Rockland and struck a utilty pole, bursting into flames and trapping Skailes inside.

Defence lawyer William McElmoyle elected trial by judge and jury and Judge Fred Green fixed Jan. 10 for a preliminary hearing.

Judge William Ostler handed out concurrent, four-month jail terms to a 19-year-old who pleaded guilty to five counts of setting fires, four counts of breaking and entering and three counts of auto theft.

Albert Alexander Gratton, no fixed address, walked into the city police station Oct. 22 in connection with a series of six fires in five days.

He had pleaded guilty earlier to the break-ins and auto thefts and was released on his undertaking to appear and given a 9 p.m. curfew.

The fires were at Cameron Bandshell in Beacon Hill Park on Oct. 15 and 17, at the Cricket Pavilion at the park and 1287 Rockland on Oct. 17, and at 230 Cook and 960 Yates on Oct. 19.

The break-ins occurred Sept. 24 at 2844 Doncaster, Sept. 29 and Oct. 5 at Ferny's Auto Body, 728 Pembroke, and between Sept. 10 and 20 at 8449 West Saanich Road.

The cars were stolen on Sept. 27 and 30 and Oct. 4.

Ostler said the series of fires was "gravely disturbing" to the court but that he had compassion and sympathy for the youth after reading the pre-sentence report.

While the report strongly urged probation, Ostler noted, he said the public interest must also be served.

He sentenced Gratton to four months on all counts, placed him on two years' probation, and ordered him to accept any psychiatric and psychological counselling as directed.

A Sidney couple was given suspended sentences and probation for operating an illegal lottery May 24.

Douglas Peter Harder, 26, and Isabel Delores Reventlow, 25, both of 9882 Third Street, changed their pleas to guilty Oct. 13 during the first witness' testimony in a trial.

Crown counsel Richard Anthony said the couple was selling tickets at $1 each in the Sidney Hotel beer parlor and offered prizes of a "Texas mickey," three 26-ounce bottles of liquor, two 26-ounce bottles of liquor, and one 26-ounce bottle of liquor.

Anthony said the pair told Sidney RCMP the purpose of the lottery was to raise money to hold a party for some Sidney youths who, they said, had been beaten up by the RCMP.

Judge Harold Alder handed out the suspended sentence and placed Harder on one year's probation and Miss Reventlow on six months' probation.

A 19-year-old former Canadian Armed Forces member was fined a total of $700 and placed on a year's probation by Green after pleading guilty to an attempted break-in, breaking and entering, and theft.

Michel Girard, 497 Island Highway, received the fines and probation after defence lawyer Roger Cardinal told the court Girard planned to return to the Halifax area.

Crown counsel Robert Mulligan said the attempted break-in occurred Oct. 8 at 892 Colville and the break-in at 864 Colville.

Mulligan said about $2,700 worth of stereo equipment was taken from the break-in and that stolen end tables were also found at Girard's residence. The tables were taken from 841 Kindersley.

Green fined Girard $200 on the attempted break-in, $350 on the break-in and $150 on the theft of the end tables valued at $80.

Did Suspect Lose Reality?

A doctor said in B.C. Supreme Court here Monday a man charged with the murder of a fellow farm worker last June could have been in a mental state causing him to misinterpret reality.

Dr. Wiechmann Billung-Meyer was called as a defence witness in the trial of Avtar Singh Gill, 40, accused in the stabbing of Joseph Pelkey, 55, in a Central Saanich potato field where they worked.

The doctor said he had access to medical records dealing with the accused, and spoke to other physicians at the weekend. As a result of this and a one hour, 25 minute interview with Gill Sunday, Billung-Meyer formed the opinion the accused suffered from alcoholism and a degree of pathological paranoia which may be schizophrenic.

He explained to a jury and Mr. Justice James Macdonald that a person with this illness may make an unreal interpetation of such ordinary events as a whisper, a glance or a gesture. A person reaching for his handkerchief might be accused of reaching for a pistol, the witness said.

This patient may also be frightened by voices he imagines to be directed against him, and be fearful of bodily harm, Billung-Meyer said.

Earlier, continuing evidence in the witness stand, Gill contradicted a statement made Friday, that he had lost the knife he had taken from his lunchbox between the time of a struggle with Pelkey and the arrival of police.

Pelkey and another laborer had struck him and he walked over to where his lunchkit was sitting, Gill said.

"Why did you take the knife from your lunch bucket?" asked defence counsel Tim Singh.

"I was frightened, scared they were going to kill me. I was single, there were two of them," Gill said through an interpreter translating from Punjabi.

"I had no intention to kill him," the accused said, adding he thought he would be able to avoid harm when they saw he had a knife.

Gill said he had worked with Pelkey many times and never fought with him: "I had no enmity with him. One day when I was sick, lying down, he gave me some water to drink."

"What did you do with the knife?"

"Threw it away . . ."

Pelkey was in an angry mood, Gill said, and when he swung at the accused and missed with his hoe, Gill landed a blow with his. Both were swinging hoes.

"I tried to hit him and he tried to hit me. I was holding the knife in my hand."

Gill said he could not remember which hand held the knife. Then the second laborer, Sandy, struck him and the assailants broke apart.

"Do you remember stabbing Joe Pelkey?" Singh asked.

Under cross-examination by Crown counsel Donald P. Laughton, Gill said Pelkey pushed him with his hoe and then both men swung their hoes at each other.

"Pelkey dropped his hoe and you stabbed him with the knife, isn't that right?" Laughton said.

"He didn't drop the hoe," Gill replied. Pelkey and the other laborer walked away, he said.

"Did you throw the knife away or lose it?"

"Threw it."

"Why did you tell us Friday you lost the knife?"

"I was afraid."

"Why did you throw the knife away Mr. Gill?"

"I was afraid from police."

"Who were you afraid of?

"From police."

"Where did you throw the knife?"

"In the grass."

Gill said there were no police there then, but he knew they would be coming because of the fight. He said he had seen blood on Pelkey and knew they would be looking for him, but he didn't run.

Laughton asked why he didn't run when Pelkey went to drink from what Gill believed was a bottle of liquor Pelkey had hidden in the grass.

Gill said he was not sure the other man was going to kill him when he returned.

In earlier testimony, the court heard evidence that Pelkey had a blood alcohol reading of .08 at the time of his death.

The case was expected to go to the jury today.

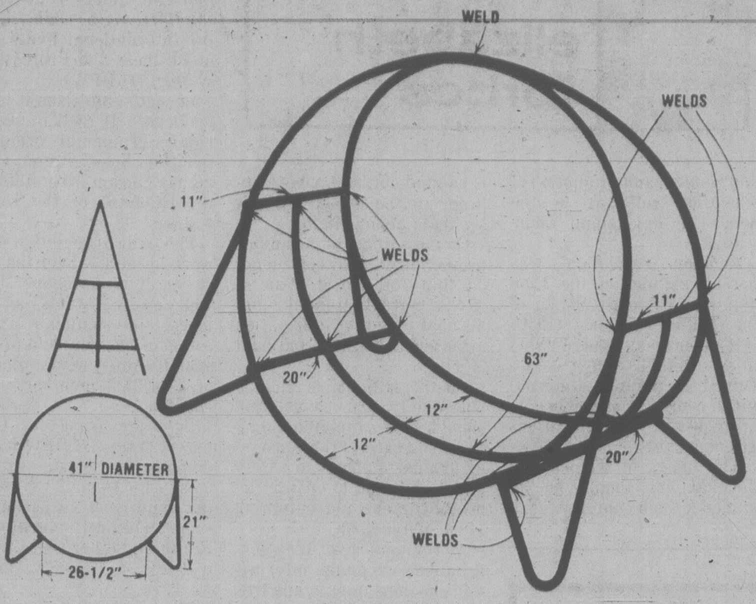
Log Holder for Less Than $10

THE MOTHER EARTH NEWS
...it tells you how



10-29

If you look forward to spending cold winter evenings beside your warm, toasty fireplace or wood-burning stove, here's a handy way to store your never-ending log supply. You can build this log holder for less than $10.

There isn't anything as satisfying in the dead of winter as a healthy fire crackling away in a fireplace, open hearth or wood-burning stove.

Nothing, that is except the secure knowledge that you have plenty of cut, split and dried wood on hand — to keep the fire blazing far into the night.

All you need to construct this log holder is a welding torch, tape measure, hacksaw, and three 20-foot lengths of ⅜-inch rebar (construction reinforcing bar).

If you don't have a torch or arc welder, don't worry. Most professional welders (or scrap yard men or body shop people) can be cajoled into making the neccessary 13 welds for a reasonable flat fee.

Begin by cutting one full length of the rebar exactly in half to create two pieces of the rod, each approximately 10 feet long. (It's not important precisely how long the lengths of the rebar are, as long as they closely match.)

Next, cut the remaining two lengths of rebar into one 63-inch-long section, four 32-inch pieces, two 20-inch-long sections, and two 11-inch lengths of the rod.

Then bend both 10-foot pieces of rebar around a truck tire, tractor tire, feeding tank, hot tub, or old telephone wire spool — anything that will form the rod into matching circles about 41 inches in diameter.

Lay one of the rings flat on a cement floor, the ground, or any level surface and form an unbroken circle by welding the joint where its two ends butt together. Do the same with the second ring.

Next, bend the four 32-inch lengths of rebar into matching "V" shapes, each of which has one 20-inch-long and one 10-inch-long leg (the bend itself should use up about two inches of the bar.) Then lay one of the big rebar rings flat on the ground and — opposite the circle's joint — weld on two of the "V" legs as shown.

The long sides of the V-legs are mounted about 21 inches up from the ring's bottom and the short sides are tack welded about 26½ inches apart.

(These measurements can vary a little one way or the other, as long as you take care to match the second circle/legs conbimation as precisely as possible to the first.

And the easiest way to do that — once the initial set of legs has been welded to its ring — is to simply lay the second circle and set of "V" supports down on the first, move them around until everything lines up, tack the "new" assembly well enough so it'll hold together, pull the "old" one out from under it so the second ring/legs can lie flat on your level surface, and finish-weld the assembly.)

You now have two identical circles of rebar attached to "V" legs.

Join these two assemblies together by welding the two pre-cut 11-inch lengths of rebar across the tops of the legs and welding the two 20-inch-long sections of rod across the legs' bottoms.

Finish it with a coat of rust-proof, flat black paint, and you've just built a dandy log holder that will look nice displayed in your living room, den or on the porch. Better yet, it's big enough to keep a large stack of wood neatly contained off the floor.

Best of all, the cost for this fireplace accessory is minimal. If you are able to scrounge up your rebar, you can build the rack for nothing but a little time and the cost of a dab of paint.

Even if you buy the reinforcing rod (at 11 cents a foot), you're still ahead because your better-than-store-bought log holder will set you back far less than $10.

Eisenhower Disease: Hard To Diagnose, Understand

By L.L. COLEMAN, M.D.

My husband has been told that he has the "Eisenhower disease" of the intestines. He tried to explain it to me, but I can't make heads or tails of it. — Mrs. C.L.

Dear Mrs. L:

Former U.S. President Eisenhower suffered from a conditon known as "ileitis." This is an inflammation of the ilium, the last portion of the small intestine at the point where it joins the large intestine. It is also known as "regional entertis" or "Crohn's disease." Incidentally, Dr. Burrill Crohn, of New York City, first described this condition and is one of the pioneers in the study of its nature and control.

There seems to be a family tendency to this condion. Although the exact cause is not known, great strides have been made, both in the understanding of ileitis and in its treatment.

It takes most astute judgment to distinguish between this particular type of intestinal disorder and other forms of intestinal involvement. X-ray studies and blood examination are the chief ways of making a positive diagnosis.

Patients at a high level of anxiety frequently misinterpret, and often completely misunderstand, the doctor's explanation of any illness. When a spouse then tries to explain it, the confusion is often compounded, as it has been in your case.

Unless a patient fully understands the doctor's message, the chances are great that a well-laid out regime of treatment will not always be followed meticulously.

About 10 years ago, I had some X-ray treatments for bursitis in my shoulder. I've heard that X-ray treatments can, at a later date, be responsible for cancer or leukemia. Is there anything to worry about? — Mr. E.V.H.

Dear Mr. H.:

Even today, X-rays are still an accepted form of treatment for some forms of bursitis. They are probably being used less frequently because cortisone and other drugs have been found to be so effective in treating this painful condition.

The dosage of X-ray that was used on your shoulder was so light that there is just about no possibility that you will run into any complications at a later date.

'First Ties . . . Then the Bind'

MANCHESTER, England (CP) — Bachelors who want to retain their single status should be wary of girls who offer to wash and iron their shirts, press their pants or adjust their collars and ties in public.

This sartorial concern is one of the "seven deadly signs" that the girl has marriage on her mind, says one leading shirt and tie manufacturer here.

"A woman's attitude to a man's clothes can tell him a great deal about her feelings toward him," the manufacturer says.

"She starts by brushing away imaginary specks of dust from his coat lapels — the first approach in touching and controlling.

"Adjusting his collar and tie is part of the next strategy in gaining control. By the time she is offering to sew on missing shirt buttons, things are getting really dangerous.

"Washing and ironing a man's shirt expresses her desire to became an integral part of his life, demonstrating to the world that she has control over his appearance and, therefore, his success."

By the time she starts buying shirts and ties it is too late for the bachelor to escape — the air is thick with betrothal and marriage, the manufacturer says.

"Women have traditionally hated the sweat and strain of washing and ironing, yet they, as one of the main purchasing agents for men's shirts, have virtually rejected the 'drip-dry' non-iron shirt in favor of the cotton mixtures," he says.

But a middle-aged woman from Vancouver hotly rejects the manufacturer's theories.

"This is part of the Englishman's inherent conceit that every woman is running after him with marriage on her mind, and it was for that reason that I married a Scotsman.

"Scots have always had to work hard for a living and they do not flatter themselves they are God's gift to women," she says.

Women in Peace Struggle. . .A UN Objective

elizabeth forbes

I've been reading some background material on the 27th session of the United Nations commission on the status of women, held in New York a few months ago, and I'd like to pass a little of this information on to you.

It's pointed out that one of the more controversial resolutions adopted at that session calls for the elaboration of a draft declaration on the participation of women in the struggle for strengthening international peace and security.

Also that this resolution invites governments and non-governmental organizations to submit their views or proposals for possible inclusion in a draft declaration to be discussed at the 1980 conference on the Decade for Women.

Another resolution recommends that the 1980 conference preparatory committee include in the agenda a review and appraisal of progress 1976-1980 on the objectives of the decade and a program of action for 1980-85.

On the sub-theme for the conference — employment, health and educaton — suggested topics for comment and information include:

— Training in technological methods of farming; also training schemes, both elementary and advanced, for women employed in industry.

— Vocational training and social support services to enable parents to combine employment and home care.

— Income-generating projects for women living in urban slums or rural or backward areas.

— Promotion of training in income-raising group activities for women in these disadvantaged areas.

— Legal programs and basic health services for women and children. Promotion of education in health, nutrition and family planning.

— Programs to achieve functional literacy and accelerated courses of education.

— Also programs to make both formal and non-formal education available to girls and women, and promotion of education relevant to the needs of developing countries.

Another resolution was passed calling on the Economic and Social Council of the United Nations (ECOSOC) to urge all governments to ensure that women are involved in planning international conferences and in governmental delegations attending such conferences.

The topics of women and development should be included in such conferences, it is pointed out; and, where appropriate, be considered as a separate agends item.

On the subject of consumer protection, it is recommended that the World Plan of Action be revised to take into account objectives for action at national and international levels.

On the national level it is suggested that legislation should be formulated to inform and protect the consumer against dangers to safety and health and to ensure the establishment and enforcing of such standards.

At regional level that governments exchange information on consumer standards and standardize product testing.

Up at the international level the resolution calls on governments to ask ECOSOC to study the subject in depth with a view to developing international standards of health, safety and availability of consumer information.

I found all this information in the autumn issue of Widening Horizons, a publication of the International Federation of Business and Professional Women (IFBPW).

In that same issue it is announced IFBPW, as a non-governmental organization, has been granted Category I consultative status at the ECOSOC of the United Nations.

This is in recognition of its work in the UN over the past 30 years in Category II, as well as its status as the largest international organization of business and professional women with a quarter of a million members in 65 countries.

In order to receive Category I status, IFBPW had to demonstrate to the satisfacion of the Council that it has the experience in economic, social, cultural, educational, health and other fields which will assist ECOSOC in its work.

The new privilege means that IFBPW can now speak directly to the ECOSOC.

It can place items on the agenda as approved by the council committee; and, on issues of deep concern, its representative can bring information directly into the debate and can influence decisions being made.

Written statements of 2,000 words instead of 500 words (as in Category II) can be circulated to members of the council.

Subjects which have grown out of study or are the result of surveys can go directly to the council, without submission to one of the commissions (always a lengthy process) especially if the matter is urgent.

And for those sessions in which this international federation has notified the intention to send a delegate, a seat will now be reserved with IFBPW in large letters posted in front of the desk for the world to see.

A privilege of value when the council chamber is crowded.

Youth Clinic

Young readers' questions on human relations and sex are answered by a panel of experts: Marion Powell, medical doctor; Blair Shaw, psychologist; Graham Cotter, clergyman; and Bruce Vichert, social worker. Send questions to Youth Clinic, The Victoria Times, 2621 Douglas St., Victoria, B.C., V8W 2N4.

Dear Mr. Vichert: I am a 16-year-old girl. Six months ago, my boyfriend who is 19, and I broke up. I haven't seen him since but I am still very much in love with him. I don't know how to get in touch with him. I don't know what I am going to do. I miss him so very badly.

All I do is mope around. It takes just one of our songs or a minute too long of remembering and I'll be crying again. My head says after six months I'll never see him again, but my heart just won't let go.

Answer: What a sad situation! I do wonder, though, if your boyfriend's feelings are as strong as yours, since he does know where you are and he has not contacted you during these six months.

I think that you may have to be strict with yourself and accept the fact that, whether or not you intended it to be this way, the relationship is finished. You have mourned for six months and I believe that it is now time for you to start to recover from the grief of losing your boyfriend.

Dear Dr. Powell: How many days after a girl's period is it safe to have intercourse? And, to get a legal abortion, do your parents have to know about it if a girl is under 18 years of age?

Answer: Since a woman's period occurs about 14 days after she ovulates, it is very difficult to work out safe days by using a calendar only. Menstrual cycles vary in length from one woman to another and from one cycle to another. In addition to this uncertainty, the sperm can live for several days in the woman's organs.

The only way to be absolutely sure of the days that are safe is to watch for symptoms that indicate time of ovulation.

In Ontario a young woman may sign consent for any operation is she is 16. This would include the consent for an abortion.

Dear Dr. Cotter: I am not seeking advice but would like to address this letter to all who know or suspect that their parents are alcoholics.

It is now a year since my father died of alcoholism. We did not realize his problem until it was too late to help. I suspected it for a long time but didn't know what to do. Now I think I should have done something.

If you suspect that either parent is alcoholic or getting that way, do something, now! Talk to them about it and let them know you are worried or concerned abut their health.

There are groups such as Alcoholics Anonymous which help problem drinkers. There are also groups for families of alcoholics.

Answer: Thank you. The group for the families of alcoholics is called Al-Anon. It might be good for you to find out about them because you will learn a lot about your own feelings and why you feel so guilty now.

dear abby

DEAR ABBY: Please permit me to write on behalf of wives who prefer to undress in the closet.

I've been married for 20 years to a man who gets turned on, if I start removing my watch.

Regardless of the time of day, if he sees me start to remove one piece of clothing, he wants me to jump into bed that very minute! No loving conversation or affectionate preliminaries to put me in a responsive mood. (All he ever talks about is his job and his health.)

COOL IN THE CLOSET

DEAR COOL: Animals can be trained (as well as constrained). Why do less for your husband than you'd do for a pet?

DEAR ABBY: I'm writing to reply to OLD TIMER, who complained about the casual clothes people wear around the office these days.

I work in an office where the boss wears T-shirts, jeans and old sneakers; most of the women wear pants (and some of them wear T-shirts with no bras). Everyone here says this is the best place they've ever worked. Because we can be casual, we can also be friendly. there's no backstabbing, competition or petty jealousy.

If a boss wants the employees to dress like robots, it's a fair bet he (or she) wants them to act and think like robots, too. It's a lot easier to get the job done quickly and efficiently of people trust you to be yourself.

As long as you're doing a good job, how you dress should be nobody's business but your own.

CASUAL

DEAR CASUAL: I'll buy the casual, comfortable, noncompetitive office attire. And I'll even go along with a trim little "30 A" in a T-shirt sans bra. But a lot of man-hours could be lost in an office where a bra-less babe in a T-shirt could fill a "38 D" — but doesn't.

DEAR ABBY: About that woman who wanted to have a chastity belt made. A competent metalsmith should be able to make one without any problem. I don't happen to be one, but I would sure like to be at the airport when she goes through the scanner. — Phil McNellis

Bio-dex

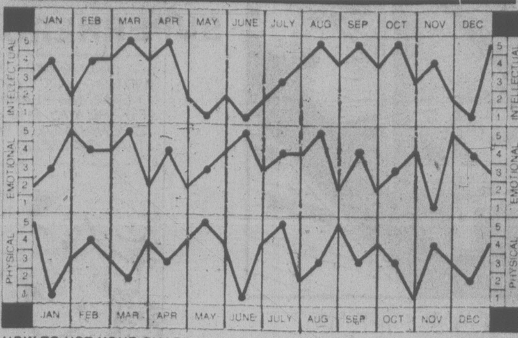
Nov. 8/78

By Ken J. Michaels

Your computerized biorhythm

© BIODEX PRODUCTIONS 1978

Dist. by Toronto Sun Syndicate



HOW TO USE YOUR CHART:

Locate your month of birth. The dots on each graph highlight your biorhythm readouts. Check the scales on the left or right for your Intellectual, Emotional and Physical factors, from 1 to 5. Add these three numbers to obtain your Bio-dex. The Bio-dex is computed on average population age based on official Government statistics.

BIO-DEX READOUT:

0-5 Negative Cycle - Wear something bright and colorful to help your sagging spirits. Try to smile as well.

6-10 Neutral Cycle - If your emotional level is high, be careful. You are in no shape to deal with dangerous situations.

11-15 Positive Cycle - A recent challenge can be accepted. Favorable financial arrangements could brighten your day.

With the onset of bad weather (for most of us) the urge to keep in shape dies away. Use your Bio-dex as an occasional reminder to follow your diet and exercise plan. A high physical reading means you can cope with the activity you have been neglecting. A high emotional level gives you the will-power to stay away from the candies and cakes. Think about how you will look in a swimsuit next summer.

If you don't know how to crochet, you are missing out on a source of great satisfaction.

Crocheting is easy to learn. Once you master the various stitches, you can produce many beautiful garments for yourself and every member of your family, as well as articles for your home.

The illustrated leaflet, How To Crochet With Yarn, shows you what to do. Even a child can follow these explicit instructions.

You will learn, for instance, that there are two methods of making a single crochet. One produces a flat surface, the other a ridged one.

For the flat surface, pass the hook under both strands of each stitch in the previous row. For the ridged surface, pass it under the back strand only.

With your request for the leaflet, please enclose a long No. 10, self-addressed, stamped envelope and send it to: Public Relations Department, Patons & Baldwins (Canada) Ltd., 1001 Roselawn Avenue, Toronto, Ontario M6B 1B8.

Please indicate your postal code and allow at least 2-3 weeks for delivery.

The Bridge Expert

By FRED KARPIN

The logic behind an opening pre-emptive bid — with a hand deficient in high cards — is easily understandable: It is to make it rougher for the opponents, who presumably hold the high cards, from interchanging information at the lower levels of bidding.

A good exemple of the efficacy of pre-emptive bids can be observed in today's deal, which was played in the Women's World Team-of-Four Championship held this past June. The hand came up in the final session, in the match between the United States and Italy: For the record, the United States won this match, and the championship.

East-West vulnerable.
South deals.

♠ 10 8 6
♡ A 9 8 5 3
◇ Q 8 7 3
♣ A

WEST	EAST
♠ A K 9 5 2	♠ Q 7 4 3
♡ 7 2	♡ Q J 10 6 4
◇ A 10	◇ K 6 2
♣ K 8 4 2	♣ 7

SOUTH
♡ K
◇ J 9 5 4
♣ Q J 10 9 6 5 3

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
3 ♣	Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening lead: King of ♠.

Sitting South was Dorothy Truscott, one of the members of the U.S. winning team. As she and her partner were playing it, an opening three bid in a minor suit showed a seven-card suit within a horrendous hand.

After winning her king of spades, West led the spade ace, which South trumped. She then led a club to dummy's ace, after which she returned to her own hand via the heart king to lead the ten of clubs. West won with her ace and then led the ace of diamonds. Next came a diamond to East's king. Had East now played a third diamond, West would have trumped, for the setting trick. But East played back a heart, which South ruffed. West's remaining trumps were now picked up and South claimed her contract.

The fact that the contract could have been defeated is really not the important point on the deal. What is significant is that East-West could have fulfilled a four-spade contract and they never even entered into the bidding.

As a matter of fact, when the United States team, on the replay, held the East-Weat cards, the Italian South player elected to pass — and the United States had no difficulty in arriving at, and fulfilling, a four-spade contract.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): You find out how far to go, how much to spend. Facts of life are spread before you. Choices may appear narrow but you are only now emerging from emotional setback. You are on road to recovery. Take one specific step at a time. Message will be illuminated until it is crystal-clear.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Create, illustrate, define meanings, avoid self-deception. Pisces, Virgo figure in scenario. Accent on speculation, change, variety, children, affairs of heart. An introverted individual pays high compliment of completely confiding in you.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Get down to the economic facts of life. Pull priorities into sharp, clear focus. In personal area, time for game-playing is finished. Relationship, involvement probably is more serious than originally anticipated.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Emphasis on signals, traffic, movement, visits, messages, buying gifts, busy relatives, neighbors. Aries, Libra figure prominently — and so does the number 9. finish rather than begin — tie loose ends. Strive for universal appeal.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Money, lost articles, payments and collections are spotlighted. You make important contact. You will be encouraged in new project. Emphasis on income, your money potential, getting to heart of matters. Leo is in picture.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Take lead — have confidence in your own choices, Aquarius, Cancer, Leo persons figure prominently. Cycle is high — intuition works overtime. Personality emphasized — you may be called upon for a special appearance or interview.

IF NOVEMBER 8 IS YOUR birthday you handle responsibility with aplomb. You are intense, dedicated, stubborn, passionate. Capricorn, Cancer persons play key roles in your life. You meet people who will be important to you this year. If single, marital status subject to change. Most memorable month of 1978 — September. New start due in November. You are competitive, magnetic and a natural executive.

Are You Sure Fertilizer Causing Plant Problems?

A letter came to hand a few years back requesting support for the theory that all human and animal ills, diseases in plants and the increase in plant pests, is caused by farmers' and gardeners' no longer using animal manures.

The writer, a member of a group described as "one small voice in the wilderness," quotes from various old herbals and gardening books such passages as "manure the soil thoroughly before planting,"

At various times in the past well-meaning folk have taken up this cause, and some gardeners today attribute all their gardening troubles to being unable to obtain animal manures.

All that is needed is a few minutes devoted to the classified section of a newspaper where, under the heading of "Fertilizers" will be found sources where cow and horse manure can be obtained in quantities from a bagful to a truckload, picked up at the farms or delivered.

If these dedicated believers in manure really wish to end their troubles, the remedy is available.

One passage I noted in an old book was not quoted in the letter. It states, "The soil must be well-manured and animal dung should be added every second year."

You may well ask what the difference is between manure and animal dung.

Researching the word "manure" we find it originally had nothing whatever to do with animals.

It turns out to be a corruption of a French word brought across the English Channel by the Normans in 1066. The French word was "manoeuvrer" — literally "to work skillfully by hand."

The Cockneys, who were employed by the French aristocracy to work their fields, were instructed to "manoeuver the soil thoroughly"; in other words, to work the soil to a fine tilth.

Animal excreta has always been known as "dung" in England. Even recently published English gardening books refer to "dung" for manure, and "chemicals" for prepared fertilizers.

The animals got into the original picture because "dung" was added to the soil when it was "manoeuvred." This corrupted word, phonetically spelled as was the custom of the period, was eventually taken to mean the animal product, a meaning still recognized.

It is well known today that animal manures added to the soil in such quantities as suggested in the old gardening books would soon create conditions toxic to vegetation. This, we can be reasonably sure, did not happen.

Tilling, working, manoeuvering — whatever you care to call it — is as essential in making a friable soil today as it was centuries ago.

So is the additon of humus, whether as dung, or home-made compost, essential in making that friable soil productive.

If we had the servants, the time, the skill, the strong backs of our distant forefathers — and the will — our soils would match theirs.

To "small voice in the wilderness," I would suggest purchasing a few bags of manure and finding out for sure if "all human and animal ills, plant diseases and the increase in pests" exist because animal manure is, supposedly, not used.

Cons Scare Kids Into Going Straight

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A grinning juvenile offender proudly announces he hopes to attend school to learn security systems so he can become a professional thief. Three months later, he has a job and a clean record. What happened?

He and thousands of other young offenders were literally scared straight in a brutal, intimidating rehabilitation program run by prisoners serving life sentences at Rahway State Prison in New Jersey. It claims an 80- to 90-per-cent success rate.

Scared Straight, a one-hour documentary for Los Angeles television station KTLA, follows 17 young people as they are locked in the prison auditorium to hear straight talk about the horrors of prison life.

The lifers pull no punches. It is a shocking program, with possibly the most offensive language ever broadcast. The producers felt censorship would blunt the program's impact.

The lifers warn the youths what they're in for in prison: Murder, homosexual rape, suicide and a total loss of identity and dignity. It is a routine of bells, boredom and brutality.

The show, narrated by Peter Falk, will be syndicated to other stations by Golden West Television Productions and will be available to civic and educational groups.

Producer-writer-director Arnold Shapiro went back to New Jersey three months after their indoctrination and found 16 of the 17 young people had gone straight. Six months later, all 17 had clean records.

"It's unequalled by traditional methods," said Judge George Nicola in the documentary. "It's effective and the most inexpensive rehabilitation method known."

Sharpiro, director of development for Golden West, took a film crew cross-country because he hoped it would inspire similar programs in California and other states.

"Everyone we've shown it to has had a positive reaction. We've shown it to the Federal Communications Commission and to officials at the justice department in Washington," he said.

The lifers at Rahway have adopted the documentary as their official film, which they use to explain their program. Sharpiro said the convicts organized the rehabilitation program themselves and prison officials have allowed them to run it with no interference.

The effectiveness of the youth program depends on creating a climate of fear. The lifers threaten the youths and even threatened the camera crew.

"The lifers know human nature. They're good at conning people. They felt that the presence of the cameras would make the kids feel safe. They didn't even want us to feel safe.

"The kids said to me later that once they threatened our cameraman, 'We felt scared.' "

"I think the thing that runs through this is that everyone co-operated — the Golden West management, KTLA, Falk, the prison officials, the convicts," Shapiro said. "They all wanted to see this story told right."

BULLISH ON BOWS

NEW YORK (AP) — Stradivarius violins long ago soared beyond most people's means, but there is still time to jump into the booming bull market in violin bows.

Bows take less space and an expert says that — purely as an investment — they make sweeter music than a violin.

"If you want to buy the best bow, it would cost you $15,000 but a violin will cost more than $100,000," he says.

"The people who are paying $2,000 to $3,000 for bows are not necessarily playing concerts," he says.

One can pay a good deal more. A gold-mounted bow by Francois Tourte, which fetched about $400 in 1960, might command up to $15,000 today. Luffkin says. At the lower end of the market, an English bow by W. E. Hill and son that sold for $700 last year was resold for about $1,000 this year.

Tourte, an illiterate craftsman who lived from 1747 to 1835, is considered the Stradivarius of bowmakers. Luffkin estimates that perhaps as many as 200 Tourte bows still exist, but "I've only seen two or three."

Beyond the financial attractions, Luffkin said, collectors like bows because they take little space, need little care and unlike violin collecting, "it is marginally easier to come by the expertise needed to be a good collector."

As objects of beauty, violin bows are decidedly an acquired taste. Once one has admired the hair (the part which is moved across the violin strings), the frog (the part near the end of the bow which holds the hair), the screw (at the same end, which adjusts the tension), the head (the far end) and the stick (the stick), you have more or less exhausted its obvious charms, unless perhaps there is an inlay in the frog.

Although Tourte bows are highly prized by musicians, prices bear little relation to musical merit, Luffkin says. Prices also depend on the fame of the maker, decoration and whether the bow came from a famous collection.

Broken Mast Delays His Winged Wonder

BREMERTON, Wash. (AP) — It's back to the drawing board for the inventor of an experimental sailboat with wing-like sails, after the mast on his trimaran broke at the end of a windy trip.

"A year's work and $2,000 down the tube," says Monte Kimball, who designed the unusual trimaran. The three-hulled boat, dubbed the Marymont, had hard sails that Kimball says should be more efficient than the standard cloth variety.

The retired machinist and toolmaker wanted to move the vessel from its anchorage in Sinclair Inlet, with the help of a friend and a 30-foot power boat.

But the wind was too strong, so the boats, lashed to one another, set off powered by the sails on Kimball's trimaran.

Kimball says the sails worked perfectly, but a problem developed when the boats, propelled by wind gusts of about 35 knots, arrived at a Port Orchard dock.

"The weight of his boat against the Marymont was too much, I guess," Kimball says. "We hit the dock pretty hard. I think that's what weakened the mast."

It broke off at a hinge and he says it can't be repaired.

"I'm not going to give up," he says. "It'll take a while but I'm gonna try 'er again."

Kimball says the trimaran's sails, in a high wind, should work like a weathercock.

"According to an aeronautical engineer I talked to, they are supposed to be 1.7 to 1.9 per cent more efficient."

The big advantage, he says, is that one man should be able to handle the trimaran, which is 41 feet long and 24 feet wide.

Kimball and his wife, Mary, bought the hulls in an unfinished state, and have spent five years building the boat. He spent about a year on the sails, plywood-and-glass-fibre affairs measuring 34 by 14½ feet and 25 by 9 feet. They are hinged and turn 360 degrees.

Mrs. Kimball says they may sail the boat down the west coast of the United States, through the Panama Canal and to the east coast for a visit with relatives.

"But that's iffy at this point," Kimball says. "First I want to see how she sails out of Neah Bay and in the Straits of Juan de Fuca."

The idea came from similar sails built by Ben Martin of Palo Alto, Calif., who had them on a 10-foot catamaran, Kimball says. He first built a set of sails for an 18-foot catamaran, then graduated to the bigger vessel.

Kimball says he had read in a magazine about Martin's experiments with a similar design and went down to see how Martin's were put together.

"His sails were different in that they folded up and also were a lot smaller," Kimball says.

Kimball returned home to try his hand at improving the design and built the wingsails for the 18-footer, which he called the Wingding. But he says he believes the new boat's sails are better, probably because they are larger.

Kimball has been sailing about 12 or 13 years, since he first strapped two canoes together and rigged the vessel with a sail. He's also constructed a 20-foot kit boat.

Tacky Tudor or the Wildest West, Oak Bay Concerned

Oak Bay village is becoming a hodge-podge of architectural styles ranging from tacky Tudor to western hitching post and 1978 Longhouse.

For two hours Monday at a public hearing, aldermen and residents exchanged comments on proposals for four land use contracts for new developments, two of them in the business section of Oak Bay Avenue referred to as the village.

One was adopted and the other — for an enlarged and redesigned Bank of Montreal at 2219 Oak Bay — was rejected.

Concern was expressed that the major improvements proposed or taking place are the work of a single architectural firm which makes much of sloping roofs, cedar shakes and overhangs.

Ald. Doug Watts said the West Coast Savings building at the corner of Monterey is too beetle-browed while Ald. John Goult suggested the designer had done a nice job.

"There ought to be something between 15th century Tudor and what I call 1978 Longhouse that is not pseudo this or pseudo that. I can't support the longhousing of the Bank of Montreal," Ald. Peter Bunn said.

Watts said one architect by default is setting the style for the whole village, and he hopes the bank would return with a new proposal.

A woman resident told council the recent overhangs and hitching posts bordering sidewalks on the avenue are more reminscent of the old west and gold rush days than the Old England atmosphere for which Oak Bay is noted.

The project approved by council is a two-storey office-retail development in stucco, masonry and cedar slated for two lots facing the avenue at 2400 Oak Bay, and including two adjoining lots at 2047 and 2053 Chaucer.

A 24 by 75 foot two-storey addition to the northwest corner of the Oak Bay Beach Hotel also was approved. It will add to kitchen space, staff changing and rest rooms and provide covered storage for garbage.

Library Cost Demanded

A close estimate of the cost of buying library space from B.C. Buildings Corp. will be demanded by Oak Bay council before any intermunicipal agreement is signed, aldermen decided Monday.

The library board wants to lease 40,975 square feet of space in the new Waddington building between Courtney and Broughton to replace the Carnegie library building and annex on Blanshard at Yates.

Under Scrutiny CUPW Men Told

TORONTO (CP) — Notices have been sent to some Toronto-area postal workers advising them that the post office is investigating their behavior of the last two weeks, the period since striking workers were ordered back to work by the federal government.

"You will be advised of either any administrative action or disciplinary action which may be taken in regard to your action," the postal workers were told in individually-addressed form letters.

An angry postal worker said Monday the post office is asking for a strike.

A management spokesman refused to specify what acts are being investigated, but he said letters have gone to some people because they did not go back to work after the back-to-work order Oct. 26 and to others because of alleged actions since.

Mail sorters said they expect the union, the Canadian Union of Postal Workers, will file grievances if any of them are punished for their actions during or after the strike.

Meanwhile, a post office spokesman said Monday mail delivery in Halifax is two to four days behind schedule because of backups caused by the recent Canadian Union of Postal Workers (CUPW) strike.

Ron Garrison, district public affairs manager for the post office, said the post office has offered inside workers overtime to clear up the blacklog.

Some workers have agreed to the overtime, he said.

The post office here had also hired some casual workers to supplement the regular work force.

Earlier Monday, Nova Local of CUPW set up two informational pickets in front of the main post office building.

The pickets left a short time later after handing out information sheets. Union officials said the sheet was the first of a series of informational bulletins that will be printed every Monday and Wednesday for daily distribution.

Although no one was stopped from entering the building, Garrison said lawyers for the post office sent reports about the picketing to justice officials.

A Nova Scotia Supreme Court order issued during the strike by inside workers last month prohibited the union from picketing.

CHILD NEGLECT PANEL SLATED

The Victoria Law Centre will present a program on Cable 10 Wednesday night to explain the provincial government's white paper on proposed legislation dealing with problems of child abuse and neglect.

Ron Rapin, a legal information counsellor at the centre, said today those participating in the program will not attempt to take sides or explain anybody's position on the issue.

The purpose of the hour-long program, which begins at 9 p.m., is to outline the contents of the existing Protection of Children Act, passed in 1901, and give an explanation of the proposed Family and Child Services Act.

Human Resources Minister Bill Vander Zalm released the white paper on the proposed legislation in September and invited interested groups to submit their ideas on the subject.

The deadline for submissions is Dec. 31, after which a report will be prepared for the government and that will form the basis for legislation to be introduced at the spring session of the legislature.

Rapin said he will moderate a three-member panel on the TV program and there will be an opportunity for viewers to phone in questions or comments.

Start Delayed Year On Alaska Pipeline

OTTAWA (CP) — Any possible early construction on the southern portions of the Alaska natural gas pipeline has been delayed at least a year, an official of the northern pipeline agency said today.

Harold Millican, administrator of the federal government agency, told the special Commons pipeline committee that Foothills Pipe Lines Ltd. had hoped to start such construction next year if approval is granted.

But the company had changed that estimate recently, he said. It now says a western leg of the line into the U.S. cannot be built until 1980 and an eastern line to the U.S. until late 1981.

Backers of the proposal say early construction of the southern portions of the line would help finance the entire $10 billion project that will carry Alaska natural gas to markets in the U.S.

Until the entire line was completed, the southern sections would be used to ship more Canadian gas to U.S. customers.

Millican said the National Energy Board, now holding hearings into natural gas supply and demand, will have to rule on whether there is a surplus of the fuel available for export. That is expected early in the new year.

If the board rules a surplus exists beyond Canadian needs, applications will be made to export some of the gas to the U.S.

The earliest a decision might come on such applications is June or July, Millican said. The pipeline company would not have time to get financing and its construction equipment in the field.

Under questioning from MPs, agency chief Mitchell Sharp said any early construction of the southern portions of the line will require guarantees that the ful northern line will be built.

Cyril Symes (NDP—Sault Ste. Marie) said he worries that if the U.S. gets more Canadian gas through the line the urgency of getting Alaskan gas will be lost.

Post Office Firing Nets $10,000

OTTAWA (CP) — The post office has been ordered to pay $10,000 in damages to a former non-union employee who refused to work because he was harassed by unionized workers.

The federal Court, in a judgment made public Monday, said Albin Achorner of Montreal was fired wrongly by the post office in 1972. It said Achorner, 49 when he was fired for abandoning his job, was a good worker who simply wanted to do his job without union interference.

Mr. Justice Allison Walsh wrote in the judgment that it is possible that post office officials decided to get rid of Achorner rather than aggravate militant union members who disliked him.

Achorner's problems began in 1965 at the main Montreal post office. Union workers staged an illegal strike and Achorner, who had no use for unions and refused to join one, crossed the picket lines.

He was taunted and threatened from then on and in June, 1966 he was beaten by fellow workers. He suffered a broken nose, chin injuries and bruises all over his body.

After that incident he demanded to be able to work without being intimidated and was transferred to a smaller unit in the post office. He worked there for five years without many problems.

Postal officials decided, however, to change his hours and he complained that the new hours would make him more available to the militants. After complaining to the postmaster-general, he was restored to his old shift but lost three months pay in the process.

Evidence indicated that by the spring of 1972 his situation was deteriorating again. Fellow employees refused to sit with him at lunch, called him abusive names and threatened him.

Finally, in May, 1972 he stopped going to work and told the post office he would return after he had received assurances that he could work in peace. The post office considered this job abandonment and fired him.

Mr. Justice Walsh said Achorner's failure to work was the result of a situation over which he had no control. It could not be considered abandonment.

Wrote the judge:

"There is also a strong possibility that faced with an unruly and militant labor force in the union, for which the Montreal post office was notorious at the time, the Montreal postal authorities may have decided to adop the line of least resistance and use Achnorner's absence from work as an excuse to dispense with his services . . . ."

Achorner had been claiming $362,000 in damages. However, Mr. Justice Walsh said Achorner was the author of some of his own misfortune.

He said Achorner did not attempt to find other work after being fired. He also should have followed up his complaints or requested a transfer, instead of sitting back and waiting for the post office to do something.

The judge awarded three years interest on the $10,000.

PARENTS PEEVED AT TRUSTEES

The first all-candidates meeting in Greater Victoria School District this year will take place tonight at 7:30 without most of the candidates.

Five trustees up for re-election won't be at the meeting at Glanford Elementary and parents are furious.

The school board decided to hold a meeting of its own tonight to finish work on the provisional budget.

Last week trustees promised Glanford parents they would keep the evening free for the election meeting.

The parents' association is sponsoring a series of five all-candidates meetings in the next two weeks.

The board let parents advertise the meetings and even agreed to reschedule a committee meeting set for tonight, Berry said.

But trustees decided at the last minute to work on the budget instead, she said.

Only chairman Susan Brice and Trustee Pete Dorazio sent word to the parents they might be able to attend the meeting after the board finished with the budget.

Also running are newcomers Tom Arkel, Martin Levin and Winfield Mott.

Diabetic Drug Risky, Says FDA

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The government says an oral diabetic drug called tolbutamide may bring an increased risk of death from heart attacks and strokes while it's helping control diabetes.

The drug, sold under the brand name Orinase, is one of a class of drugs involved in controversy for nearly a decade.

The Food and Drug Administration said Monday that on the basis of its latest review, it intends to proceed with a 1975 proposal under which doctors would be told of the risks of all oral diabetic drugs and advised to prescribe them only if patients have unsuccessfully tried diets or diets plus insulin.

The proposal was stalled because of concerns by some doctors that the study had not been properly audited by FDA.

The agency said it now has completed such an audit and concludes that while there were some errors, none invalidated the finding that "cardiovascular mortality was higher in the group of patients treated with tolbutamide."

Pygmy Chimps Seen As Man's Ancestor

By ROBERT MUSSELL
United Press International

LONDON — A team of American scientists, using chemistry as well as the study of anatomical fossils, has come to the conclusion that the pygmy chimpanzee whose descendants are still romping in the forests of Zaire is the common ancestor of Man and the great apes.

The theory published in the science magazine, Nature, radically shortens the time scale for the branching off of man, the gorilla and Pan troglodytes (the larger species of chimpanzee) into separate branches of the tree of evolution. The paper suggests this epochal event took place somewhere between 4 and 6 million years ago, comparatively recent as the history of life on the planet goes.

The paper was contributed by Adrienne L. Zihlman and Vincent M. Sarich of the University of California, John E. Cronin of Harvard and Douglas L.Cramer of the New York University School of Medicine.

The team said that any convincing theory of human origins would have to clarify man's relationships not only with fossils but with living primates.

Lines of descent "have previously been determined mainly by anatomical similarities," the report said, "but now biochemical similarities provide independent criteria for evolutionary relationships."

The scientists said five different analytical techniques "all indicate that chimpanzees, gorillas and humans share a substantial common ancestry, and that the Asiatic apes (gibbons and orangutans) diverged earlier from this lineage.

"These findings directly conflict with the more widely held view that all the great apes diverged from a common ancestor long after the 'origin' of the evolutionary line leading to modern humans. The molecular data consistently suggest a much more recent origin of the man-chimpanzee-gorilla separation than was previously imagined, namely in the range of 4-6 million years ago."

According to the research, the two chimpanzee species, though biochemically distinct, are more closely related to each other than either is to humans or gorillas and apparently became separate species after the initial three-way split.

"We therefore here contend," the article said, "that among living species the pygmy chimpanzee offers us the best prototype of the prehominid ancestor. Biochemical, morphological, behavioral and paleontological data support this proposition and argue for a relatively recent and accelerated divergence of the hominid (man-like) from the pongid (ape-like) line."

The pygmy chimpanzee has not been intensively studied, the team said, but it is known that they feed high on the trees as well as on the ground, they walk bi-pedally more than do common chimpanzees, they are highly intelligent and flexible in feeding and in sexual and communicatory behavior.

Today's U.S. Vote A Giant Ho-Hum

By CLAUDE ADAMS
Times Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON — What if they called an election and nobody showed up?

Voter apathy in the United States hasn't yet reached this stage, but the midterm congressional elections today—which have been widely written off as a "nothing political event— could be important as a barometer of national indifference.

Less than a third of eligible American voters are expected to cast ballots today in Senate, House of Representatives and state governors' races that fall smack in the middle of President Carter's first term as president.

The U.S. has not had a voter turnout of less than 33 per cent since the wartime election of 1942.

Those who do vote today are expected to return the Democrats as the dominant party in congress, although the Republicans will make some small gains. That is the historical pattern in midterm elections.

In spite of the so-called "national to revolt" which was supposed to galvanize public interest in 1978, the voice of the people today will likely be an overwhelming ho-hum. That's because candidates of both parties have almost unanimously portrayed themselves as tax cutters and advocates of government spending restraint.

"Voters no longer see a difference between the two parties on handling the major issues of the day, be it inflation, taxes or government spending," national pollster Peter Hart told the Wall Street Journal last week.

Experts in U.S. voting patterns say that unless someone can identify and correct the growing American discontent with its politics, "we will shortly have government of, for and by the few."

The candidates themselves, with the low tones of their campaigns, must take a substantial blame for turning off the voters. An important senate race in Illinois, for example, has turned on charges that the incumbent has racist tendencies because be he once expressed support for the policies of a former agriculture secretary who made an indelicate joke about blacks.

In Massachusetts, the Senate's only black member, Edward Brooke, has been desperately fighting charges that he mishandled his finances after a divorce. In Texas, an incumbent senator attracted national publicity, and the scorn of voters, for not shaking hands with his challenger at a party function.

In Pennsylvania, two incumbents running for re-election are under indictment for corruption while the crude white-power mayor of Philadelphia, Frank Rizzo, is seeking the right to run for an unprecedented third term.

Across the country, candidates for both parties are playing at ideological acrobatics, trying to fall into line with the public's demand for tax cuts while not proposing to cut essential government services.

Hopefuls in both parties quickly shifted their campaigns to fall into step with the new rhythm of public concern.

However, in three areas the election today has more than marginal interest for Americans looking toward 1980:

—Voters in 16 states will vote on citizen-lawmaking issues, called "initiatives" or referenda, on everything from tax reduction to returnable bottles.

Of prime interest are a proposition in California that would require the firing of homosexual teachers, a constitutional amendment in Florida that would allow casino gambling, and a "right-to-work" amendment in Missouri.

SCANDAL IN THE HAGUE OVER NAZI-TAINTED MP

THE HAGUE (Reuter) — The Netherlands faced a major political scandal Monday after a prominent member of parliament was accused of working for the Nazis during the Second World War.

The government-backed National War Documentation Institute said in a report that Wim Aantjes, parliamentary floor leader of the governing Christian Democratic party (CDA), had been employed "either as a member of the staff or a guard" in the closing months of the war at a labor camp in Nazi-occupied Netherlands.

A spokesman for Premier Andreas Van Agt, leader of the CDA, said cabinet ministers have received copies of the report and that the government has made available material from official archives to enable it to be compiled.

Spy Manuals Missing - U.S.

The disclosure came at the start of the trial of William Kampiles, a former Central Intelligence Agency officer who is accused of selling one of the manuals to the Soviet Union for $3,000.

U.S. attorney David Ready told a court in the industrial city of Hammond that the manual detailed technical data of the KH-11 satellite reconnaissance system—called the Big Bird.

The prosecution alleged that Kampiles, 23-year-old son of a Greek immigrant steelworker, pocketed the manual while working at CIA headquarters in Langley, Va., between March and November last year.

Ready charged that Kampiles handed the manual over in two sections to a Soviet agent in Athens between Feb. 23 and March 2 this year for $3,000.

The prosecution said Kampiles asked for $10,000 but the Soviet agent—identified as Michael Zavali, a military attache at the Soviet embassy in Athens—replied that his superiors considered the price excessive.

China Sitting on Top Of 100B Barrels of Oil

TOKYO (UPI) — China is sitting on top of a huge untapped pool of 100 billion barrels of oil, three times the known reserves of the United States, Energy Secretary James Schlesinger said today.

Schlesinger's estimate of Chinese oil production potential was three times as great as any previously given by a U.S. official and left no doubt that China is viewed as a possible major producer of petroleum in the future.

But Schlesinger, who spent three weeks in China before returning to Tokyo Sunday, said any role for American and other big international oil companies in developing China's oil industry lies some years in the future.

He also said the current oil strike in Iran — which supplies the United States with about 8 percent of its oil — does not pose any serious threat immediately, but could have a "marked impact" on oil prices if the industry is idled for months.

Right now, Schlesinger said, China does not need U.S. technology because it is concentrating on expanding its drilling in shallow coastal waters.

Swiss Inch Towards UN Membership

By JOHN CALLCOTT

GENEVA (UPI) — Jealous of its neutrality and never known for rushing things, prudent Switzerland is finally moving toward membership in the United Nations — 33 years after the organization was founded.

Yet it won't be until 1982 or 1983 before the government stages the required national referendum.

Government officials in the capital of Berne say federal elections in 1979 and then careful pro-UN campaigning and preparation by the state rule out an earlier vote, although 1981 is an outside possibility.

Above all, the government wants to be as sure as possible that the Swiss people, wary of anything that could encroach on their neutrality, will approve UN membership.

"It would be nothing short of diastrous if the population voted against," a foreign ministry official said.

When the referendum does take place, the government will need a simple majority both of the popular vote and of the vote within each of the 23 cantons, or states, to take Switzerland into the world organization, founded in San Francisco in 1945.

Switzerland is the only independent nation of significant size and importance to remain outside the UN and the only country to do so voluntarily rather than for political reasons.

With a population of 6.3 million, Switzerland is the world's second-richest nation, after Kuwait, on the basis of per capita national wealth. In 1977, the Swiss gross national product amounted to $10,063 per citizen — ahead of, for example, the United States where the figure was $8,715.

But while money is always of consummate interest to the Swiss, the cost of UN membership will play little if any role in the eventual vote.

Switzerland already belongs to most of the UN specialized agencies such as the World Health Oranization and International Labor Organization, paying 90 million francs annually in dues.

That is $60 million at current exchange rates and membership in the UN proper, government officials say, will add a mere 10 percent, or $6 million, to the bill.

Indirectly, however, money does become significant because of Austria's bid to attract more UN agencies to Vienna, luring some of them away from Geneva where there are 10,000 UN employees at the organization's European headquarters.

Once in the United Nations, Swiss officials concede, Switzerland will be better placed to keep its various agencies in Geneva.

Until last year the Swiss government was only lukewarm about pushing the UN membership issue in the face of general national opposition or indifference. In 1977, however, the government for the first time declared firm support for membership while setting no date for the vote.

Some new and younger men in the government, in particular new Foreign Minister Pierre Aubert, have reinforced the pro-UN trend.

Switzerland is finding it increasingly difficult to justify its staying outside, Aubert said in a recent interview. The Swiss, he said, "can't wash their hands" of the UN and the crucial problems it faces, and Switzerland must stop "judging others from its mountaintops."

By remaining outside the UN, Aubert stated, Switzerland would risk isolating itself, "little by little suffocating ourselves."

Government officials, including Aubert, agree that the people could say "no."

"All referendums are risky," the foreign minister said.

"Those percentages are probably about right," said Frederic Baumann, of the Swiss UN Society.

"Hopefully the number of those in favor will increase rapidly now that we finally have full government support for membership," Baumann said. "But anything could happen and if the UN does something stupid it could change everything."

Government officials are fully aware of this danger.

"You can be sure," a foreign ministry official said, "that we will first let the pro-UN trend gather a lot more momentum."

86,000 Illegal Catches

SEATTLE (AP) — About 86,000 chum salmon have been caught illegally in Puget Sound during the first three weeks of the current run, the state fisheries department reports.

A department statement issued Monday said all but 4,000 of the illegally-caught fish had been taken by non-Indians.

The statement came as federal authorities reported a step-up in efforts to halt poaching, arresting 23 persons last week to bring the total number of arrests to 179 persons since the salmon runs started early in the summer.

The Northwest Indian Fisheries Commission, which represents 10 treaty tribes in western Washington, says illegal fishing by commercial gillnetters is one reason its members aren't getting their share of the fish.

Under a 1974 federal court ruling, treaty Indians must be allowed to catch up to half the harvestable salmon and steelhead migrating past their ancestral off-reservation fishing grounds.

'TV Causes Rule Abuse In Commons'

OTTAWA (CP) — The government switched roles with the opposition Monday and went on the attack, charging that its publicity-seeking opponents are abusing Commons rules to try and make the Liberals look bad on television.

Commons business was set aside for the day as MPs from all parties discussed ways to streamline day-to-day operations without restricting the already limited speaking roles of the more than 200 backbench MPs.

Deputy Prime Minister Allan MacEachen initiated the four hours of debate by criticizing the opposition for deliberately abusing rules just prior to the daily question period in a calculated effort to attract publicity.

The government has become sensitive about proposed motions of "urgent and pressing necessity" which come just before the 45-minute daily question period.

The motions under standing order 43 and routinely turned back by the government, require unanimous consent before they can be debated and passed.

With the advent of televised Commons proceedings, opposition MPs are seen to be criticizing government policy or raising local constituency concerns without a reply from the government benches.

MacEachen told the Commons the opposition has started using the 51-year-old rule to deliver mini-speeches, smuggle in unsubstantiated allegations and to deliver frivolous motions that waste the time of the House.

The government House leader warned that unless the opposition adheres more to the spirit of the rule, the Liberals would start to throw up procedural roadblocks.

Stanley Knowles, New Democratic House leader, said he was surprised at MacEachen's "cry-baby attitude."

"I think a little more sense of humor might do us a great deal of good," Knowles said.

Broadcasting Disclosure Plan Hit

TORONTO (CP) — The president of the Canadian Association of Broadcasters says procedural changes proposed by the Canadian Radio-television and Telecommunications Commission (CRTC) would be the death knell of an efficient private broadcasting system.

"The CRTC wants private broadcasters to disclose financial information at the station level, no matter how confidential that information may be," G. G. E. Steele said in an interview.

"Our members are unanimously upset about this. They are concerned about disclosure in a competitive marketplace and they are worried about the regulatory philosophy of the CRTC."

An association brief to the commission last week said there is a shift in the attitudes of all democratic governments and regulatory agencies towards deregulation.

The commission's proposals would require public disclosure of all correspondence between private broadcasters and the commission and all audited annual financial statements for "that particular undertaking, its licencee and any holding company."

The commission has said more extensive disclosure was needed "to promote and to facilitate public interest and involvement in broadcasting matters."

The commission also says the onus should be on broadcasters to prove why the information should not be disclosed.

Steele said disclosure of correspondence would inhibit seriously written communication with the commission and would remove any incentive for broadcasters to explore new ideas.

The association also said in its brief that "what seems to be forgotten is that private broadcasters compete for their revenues . . . and that they would be placed at a severe disadvantage if confidential information as suggested was forced into the public domain."

Steele said the commission has not demonstrated why the public should have access to this information.

He said the private broadcasting industry is not a monopoly and should not be regulated in the same manner as the telecommunication sector.

6th MAN CONFIRMED

MONTREAL (CP) — Former RCMP officer Donald McLeery says he is sure there was a sixth man involved in the October 1970 kidnapping of James Cross, then British trade commissioner to Montreal.

The discovery of his existence came about through a hoax played on terrorist suspect Jacques Cossette-Trudel, McLeery said in an interview.

The RCMP took a picture of a man who met with Cossette-Trudel at a restaurant during the October crisis and the following day, McLeery showed the suspect the photograph, claiming Mr. X was a police informer, the former staff sergeant said.

McLeery said he met Cossette-Trudel and told him: "Come on, you think we're stupid? You see this guy, he's the one who sold you out. He told us everything.

"I planted a seed of doubt in the mind of Cossette-Trudel and he bought it."

As a result of the bluff, the Front de Liberation du Quebec cell has been left with the impression that they had a police informer in their group, McLeery said.

Speculation about the role of the man called Mr. X in the Cross kidnapping arose following an interview Montreal-Matin editorialist Marc Laurendeau had with the Cossette-Trudels, exiled Quebec terrorists now living in Paris.

"The only reason he told . . . Laurendeau about the sixth person was to get revenge and make it look as if the RCMP knew all along where Cross was," McLeery said.

Crown Corp. Status For Forest Labs Eyed

OTTAWA (CP) — Two federal forest products laboratories might be made into Crown corporations to ensure their independence, Environment Minister Len Marchand said Monday.

The labs in Vancouver and Ottawa will lose $3.3 million in federal support April 1 as part of government cost-cutting. But Marchand said in the Commons he hopes the cuts will be made up by the forest industry, universities and provincial governments.

And Ottawa will continue to provide the labs with $4 million, he said in an interview.

Marchand also said the Forest Management Research Institute, a federal agency to be moved to the Pettawawa forestry station at Chalk River, Ont., from Ottawa, didn't get part of a $750,000 federal contract because of the need to contract out research to private industry.

The contract, to study forest biomass as an energy source, went to the Forest Engineering Research Institute of Canada.

Cyril Symes (NDP-Sault Ste. Marie) said a decision by Marchand to move the Forest Management Institute and the Forest Fire Research Institute to Pettawawa to keep the station open wasn't rational.

The two institutes need access to the computor technology available to them in Ottawa, Symes said. But Marchand said the moves will make Pettawawa an even better station than it now is.

Permanent Voter List Studied By Ottawa

OTTAWA (CP) — Statistics Canada field teams undertake a $75,000 study this month that could help MPs decide whether the country should have a permanent list of voters.

In a press release, the chief electoral office said the statisticians will gather information that will be used to assess the current system of voter registration — door-to-door enumeration after an election is called, then a period for list revision.

The survey will be taken in areas where recent byelections were held.

The idea is to check the coverage and accuracy of voter registration. A similar survey may be taken after the general election year.

Results will be used to see whether the registration system should be replaced by one where eligible voters are placed on permanent lists.

Farmers Seek Increase

OTTAWA (CP) — Dairy farmers want a pay raise but agriculture officials say it could cause a drop in consumer demand for butter, cheese and ice cream.

Without the increase, the farmers reply, there could be a shortfall in the next few months in the production of industrial milk, used in the manufacture of dairy products.

The Dairy Farmers of Canada, the producer association, has asked the federal government to increase the target return price, a guide to what processors pay producers for their milk. The actual amount is determined province by province.

The formula used to determine the target return indicated an increase was due at the end of June to $12.94 a hundredweight from $12.42 a hundredweight. By now the figure would be about $13.

The farmers say if the federal government doesn't want to approve an increase, it should say so.

The Canadian dairy commission, which supervises the national dairy plan, says the increase isn't automatic and consumer interests have to be considered.

There is no danger of a shortage of milk, a commission spokesman said. "In fact we see a balanced year; we're trying to get stability" after several years of overproduction.

He said farmers should realize that "increases in target returns can more than be offset by a drop in consumption because of higher prices."

A farmers' spokesman agreed there would likely be a drop in demand for butter and cheese if prices are increased, but predicted it would not be as great as some fear.

A spokesman for the dairy farmers said Ottawa is not being asked to increase its $2.66-a-hundredweight subsidy on industrial milk.

Subliminal Tapes Stolen From Quebec Radio Station

STE. ADELE, Que. (CP) — CIME-FM, a radio station that has been broadcasting subliminal messages as an experiment since September, had some of the special equipment that enables it to do this stolen Sunday night, a station spokesman said.

Andre-Gilles Roger said that some tapes of programs containing subliminal messages, as well as a turntable and electronic equipment, were missing as well.

He said the exact value of the stolen equipment had not been determined, but he estimated it would run into the thousands of dollars.

The subliminal messages —intended to relax radio listeners — were inserted into regular evening music programming. The program included a warning to drivers and other people who wanted to stay alert to switch stations.

The station, which broadcasts from the Laurentians, about 70 kilometres north of Montreal, remains on the air.

OLDS FIRE INQUIRY SLATED

OLDS, Alta. (CP) — A public inquiry into a fire which devastated this community last Wednesday will be held here on Nov. 28-29, W. D. MacKay, provincial fire commissioner said Monday.

The fire commissioner will preside at the inquiry which is "to determine the cause, origin and circumstances of the fire."

The fire destroyed a skating rink, agriculture and curling arenas and three annexes to grain elevators.

MacKay said an investigation into the cause of the fire is continuing.

DERAILED ACID CARS MAKE CLOUD

THUNDER BAY, Ont. (CP) — Thousands of gallons of sulphuric acid spilled Monday night when five cars of a 36-car tanker train derailed in a collision with a freight train.

A toxic cloud and acid fumes were centred over the crash site in the main rail yards southwest of the city.

Police cordoned off the area and were monitoring wind shifts but said no evacuation was planned.

Dangerous concentrations of the gas existed only in the immediate area, they said.

Revenue for the nine months was $902.5 million, up from revenues of $523.1 million for the same period in 1977.

Canadian police are checking fresh reports that Canadian arms have been shipped to South Africa in defiance of a United Nations arms embargo.

But a South African defence spokesman in Pretoria said reports of arms shipments are mere speculation.

The question of whether South Africa has been getting arms from Canada and other Western countries, despite official embargoes against such shipments, developed from a report in The Times of London and a BBC television program, Panorama, that South Africa got at least 40,000 special long-range 155-millimetre shells and guns, radar and other equipment.

These London reports Monday said the arms were shipped by a U.S. company called Space Research Corp., located in North Troy, Vt., at the Canadian border.

However, the CBC program, The Fifth Estate, to be aired tonight, said the company involved was Space Research Corp. of Highwater, Que., which has been shipping 155-millimetre artillery shells to a test site on the Caribbean island of Antigua. The CBC television program claims the shells were reshipped from Antigua to South Africa.

A Space Research Corp. spokesman said today his firm shipped 12,988 inert 155-mm. artillery shell casings to Spain last July. Whether they were used in Spain or elsewhere is beyond the control of the company, the spokesman said.

But E.S. Affleck of the legal firm of Fasken and Calvin, which has been retained by Space Research, denied arms or military equipment were shipped to South Africa.

Space Research has been testing a new long-range artillery system on Antigua. Affleck said there is a good chance that the prototype may be accepted by NATO within a year to provide a gun system far superior than the one currently used by the Soviet Union and the Warsaw bloc.

Current models in both the East and West fire a distance of about 23 to 30 kilometres. The Space Research model would fire about 40 km.

Affleck said that if the prototype is accepted by NATO, there would be a huge contract for Canada providing about 3,000 jobs in Quebec and other Canadian areas.

The CBC program says that the shells shipped to Antigua were in some cases trans-shipped to South Africa. It also alleges that a Canadian shipment of about 21,000 inert shells to Spain last year ended up in South Africa as well.

Affleck said the shipment to Spain last year was a legal export with the Spanish government anxious to improve the country's military.

The CBC program says shipments overseas last year were mainly aboard S.A. Tugelaland, a ship registered in West Germany but owned by a South African firm.

Higher Rates Forecast

TORONTO (CP) — Interest rates in Canada and the United States are expected to rise higher yet, says a former U.S. state department official and consultant to the World Bank.

"The recent increases are only a belated over-reaction to things that have been going on for a decade and a half — the cost of the Vietnam war, higher oil prices, and the breakdown of the fixed exchange rate system," said Miklos Szabo-Pelsoczi, senior adviser with Bache Halsey Stuart Shields Inc. of New York.

The Canadian bank rate, which was 7.5 per cent at the beginning of the year, has been raised six times in the last eight months, reaching a record 10.75 per cent.

The U.S. discount rate has been increased seven times since the beginning of the year, to a record 9.5 per cent from six per cent.

Szabo-Pelsoczi said the U.S. has an accumulated deficit of about $120 billion. But the build-up of U.S. dollar deposits in Europe and Japan is compounded by the multiplier effect of foreign bank credit creation puts the total outstanding deficit closer to $500 billion, he said.

"This wild-west style of banking has resulted in additional money creation which is not under the direct control of any government."

Finance Minister Jean Chretien admitted Monday in Ottawa that the latest increase in the trend-setting Bank of Canada interest rate will pose "short-term economic inconveniences" for the country.

But Chretien, under fire in the Commons from opposition critics who charged the increase will further weaken an already-sluggish economy, said he hoped rates will come down once the Canadian and U.S. dollars stabilize.

The finance minister also said he hopes to announce the date of a budget either today or Wednesday.

Also in Ottawa Monday, Gerald Bouey, governor of the central bank said the Bank of Canada knew there

Drunken Drivers On Tape

Attorney - General Garde Gardom said Monday the use of videotape as evidence against impaired drivers may become mandatory throughout B.C.

Vernon RCMP have been video-taping persons charged with impaired driving and last week a court allowed the tape to be used as evidence.

Gardom said the experimental program has been successful and police need all the tools available to them to combat the drinking-driving problem.

The attorney-general said he will review the Vernon court case before making a final decision.

170 Hurt On Ferry

NEW YORK (AP) — At least 170 persons were reported injured today when a Staten Island ferry crashed against a concrete seawall at the lower tip of Manhattan as it tried to dock in heavy fog.

Authorities said the ferry, crowded with about 2,000 passengers and crew, was never in danger of sinking.

About two metres of the steel deck peeled back and passengers were thrown about like rag dolls. "It looked like it was opened by a giant can opener," said one passenger.

Police said at least 30 of those aboard suffered serious injuries and 140 others were said to have suffered bruises and cuts in the crash off Battery Park about 7:30 a.m.

There were broken arms, broken legs and lacerated faces from broken glass.

WHITES ATTACKED

Witnesses said angry groups tried to haul three whites from a police car after their detention outside a post office.

Four other whites — two of them on a motorcycle — were also attacked in the street.

No details were available on whether they were injured.

Troops on Lusaka's main street, Cairo Road, tried to contain the crowds of about 200 and police also helped to push them back, the witnesses said.

Lusaka has been alive with rumors about white spies in the capital since the attacks began.

The attacks on whites appear to have started Monday night when police arrested two South Africans for their protection as a mob gathered round them, witnesses said.

Jobless: Lowest Level In Year

OTTAWA (CP) — Unemployment dropped to its lowest level since August, 1977, last month, with the seasonally-adjusted jobless rate at 8.2 per cent, Statistics Canada reported today.

However, in B.C. the rate rose to 8.2 per cent from 8.1 per cent a month earlier. Nova Scotia was the only other province where the employment situation worsened.

In Victoria, Labor Minister Allan Williams said today he is not concerned about the latest increase.

"It would startle me except I also find, on analysis, the same result was experienced in 1977 between the months of September and October," he said. "It would appear therefore to be an increase of a seasonal nature."

Williams said he expects the unemployment rate will drop within the next few months.

"I think the fact that we have, in the past year, increased the number of employed persons by 54,000 is an indication that the activities of government and the encouragement which has been given to the private sector is working, and we'll continue to do that," he said.

The federal agency said there were 798,000 Canadianswithout jobs in October and the unemployment rate before adjustments are made to take into account seasonal changes in the work force was 7.2 per cent.

In September, the seasonally-adjusted rate, which reflects trends in the labor force, stood at 8.5 per cent. The actual number of unemployed then was 854,000.

There were 10,282,000 persons with jobs last month, compared with 9,920,000 a

Concrete-lined drainage basin involved in Vantreight controversy

By PAUL MOSS
Times Staff

The chairman of Saanich council's bylaw enforcement committee admitted Monday night his sons illegally built drainage facilities on municipal property.

But Ald. Geoff Vantreight defended what had been done by telling fellow aldermen farmers must "make hay when the sun shines."

"Accordingly, it was necessary that my sons proceed to dig the ditches and build the drainage basin (on Panama Flats) before ironing out all of the essential details of their proposed potato farming scheme," Vantreight said in a letter to council.

Among the essential details was the basic step of obtaining the municipality's permission to use its land and carry out the drainage work, which included construction of a concrete basin 50 feet long by 35 feet wide.

The transgression was brought to the Saanich administration's attention last Friday and referred to council for a discussion which clearly proved embarrassing to several aldermen.

It was eventually decided to refer the whole matter to the public works committee and ask for a more detailed staff report.

The Vantreights recently leased Panama Flats acreage from William Edge of Carey Road. They are now exercising an option to buy the property, which is adjacent to municipally-owned land.

Outside the council chamber Monday night Ian Vantreight said in answer to a reporter's question that there was no confusion over the unmarked boundary line between the two properties.

"Time was of the essence to make that land work," he said.

"To go through the channels one has to, might have taken a little bit too long."

Ald. Vantreight said in his letter that because a viable potato-growing operation needs 120 to 140 frost-free days, his sons sought an urgent solution to the Panama Flats flooding problem to ensure they could use the land early in April.

Since drainage was essential and the area had been designated for farming they assumed the necessary municipal approval would be forthcoming.

"Perhaps their enthusiasm and haste were premature," he added.

During the council debate Ald. John Mika asked for clarification of a discrepancy between the letters from municipal administrator William Tremayne and Ald. Vantreight.

He said the former referred to the work as having been done by Vantreight and Sons while the alderman's letter referred only to his sons.

"Is there some other company that has done work here?" Mika inquired.

Ian Vantreight said there is no such corporate entity as G.A. Vantreight and Sons, which is merely a name on the side of a truck. He said the farming operation is run

MYSTERY ILLNESS HITS ELTON JOHN

LONDON (UPI) — Rock star Elton John was rushed to a private London clinic Tuesday suffering from what his record company described as a "mystery illness."

A spokeswoman for Rocket Records emphatically denied newspaper reports the 31-year-old singer had suffered a heart attack.

"That is just not true," she said. "He has a mystery illness and tests are being carried out now. He played football on Sunday and as far as we know he was in good health."

John had been due to fly to Paris Tuesday for a checkup on his much publicized hair transplant. He reportedly collapsed at his home in Buckinghamshire, just northwest of London, and was rushed to the Harley Street Clinic by ambulance about midday.

Iran Still in Turmoil

Times News Services

TEHRAN — The former director of Iran's national airline died of gunshot wounds in a Tehran hospital today and there were conflicting reports whether he committed suicide or was assassinated.

Retired air force Gen. Ali Mohammed Khademi was shot Sunday outside his home in a Tehran suburb. Government officials said they believed the wound was self-inflicted, but a member of the general's family said he was attacked by a gang of youths.

Khademi had been accused of accepting sums of money on aircraft purchases.

Scattered opposition to Shah Mohammed Reza Pahlavi's military government, meanwhile, continued to rock the country.

Sporadic shooting broke out in southern parts of the capital and unconfirmed reports from the provinces also said troops opened fire in several cities in a bid to stem rioting.

No reports of casualties were immediately available.

On the political front, Iran's two-day-old military government began a crackdown against the shah's opponents and former top government officials by reimposing newspaper censorhip and arresting political activists. The crackdown also apparently involved breaking up an airlines strike.

All publications except the pro-government newspaper Rastakhiz were shut down as news staffs of other papers resisted renewed censorship and voluntarily suspended publication.

The former government officials, including several governors general who were arrested in the new crackdown, had been accused of corruption and gross abuse of authority, unofficial reports said. Civilian authorities de-

Mayor Killed

ARNPRIOR, Ont. (CP) — Robert Stewart, 61, mayor of Ladysmith, was killed Monday when he was hit by a truck while he was crossing a street, police said today. Stewart, who was studying at the Federal Study Centre, is survived by his wife and family in Ladysmith.

Rains Ease as Disaster Declared

he Terrace-Kitimat region which was declared a disaster area Monday night got a break from the weather today.

Heavy rains Monday had grounded helicopter relief flights to outlying communities and hampered work on highways washed out by two days of flooding last week.

However, the rain stopped this morning and the Terrace weather office was predicting only a few scattered showers today.

More than 315 millimetres — 12 inches — have fallen in the area during the past week.

Deputy Premier Grace McCarthy said Monday night the provincial cabinet had agreed to use the government's major disaster fund, which provides financial assistance to those hurt by the flood.

The disaster declaration by the provincial government came in the wake of floods which have caused millions of dollars in damage to homes, roads and bridges.

The cabinet is also expecting the federal government to respond today to a provincial request for financial aid to assist flood victims.

"We want to make it clear that we will use all of the resources of the provincial administration, and we will call on the federal government as well, to help the people who are under such strain and worry and concern," Mrs. McCarthy said.

All provincial ministries will be involved in developing priority measures to ensure that service and transportation are established, she said.

The minister reiterated government promises that assistance will be available to those who suffered personal property losses.

She said a formula for awarding aid will be set when the waters subside and assessment teams are sent in to assist people with claims.

Highways Minister Alex Fraser, the minister responsible for the cleanup, said it is too early to assess the final damage.

However, he said damage to roads and bridges totals more than $10 million and the figure is going up every hour.

Rain and poor visibility had grounded helicopter relief flights to outlying communities, hampered road repair work and caused washouts which led to the closure of Highway 25 between Kitimat and Terrace.

More than 150 men and 100 pieces of equipment were mobilized during the weekend in one of the largest highway reconstruction projects in the province's history.

Highways ministry spokesman Mike O'Connor said Highway 16, which runs west toward Prince George, could be open to single-lane traffic this week, but it could be at least 12 months before the

'We Won't Be Able To Replace Ourselves'

Futurologist Geoffrey N. Calvert says today's unemployment problems will be minor compared to those brought on by a decline in population. By the late 1980s, he predicts, there will be shortages in the work force

By AB KENT
Times Staff

TODAY'S massive unemployment pales besides the population problem Canadians will face face 10 years down the road, says futurologist Geoffrey N. Calvert.

While Third World nations continue to cartwheel through the population explosion, Canada and other industrial nations will be in a population decline, their fertility rate ebbing.

"That's terrifying. We won't be able to replace ourselves," Calvert said in an interview.

The alarming outlook is expressed matter-of-factly by one of North America's most respected authorities on such issues as food and energy resources, economics, population studies and pension funding.

On the problems of population and employment, Calvert notes the great concentration of unemployed is among young people, the result of the post-Second World War baby boom which lasted into the 1960s.

In time, this youth bulge will be incorporated into the labor market as others reach retirement age and by the late 1980s, Calvert expects, there will be shortages in the work force.

Calvert says there are several factors responsible, among them a definite social trend away from families, a reluctance to bring children into an unsettled world, a high rate of divorce, a high rate of abortions and generally fewer couples having children.

At present there is a rise in the birth rate, but the opposite is true of the fertility rate — the actual proportion of women in society of child-bearing age, Calvert said.

Calvert has been consulted by government, national institutions and industry and has worked for the World Bank.

Since retiring from a leading international actuarial consulting firm, he has remained active as a private consultant, author and lecturer while maintaining his home at Towner Bay, near Sidney.

His latest publication, Twelve Faces of Inflation, appearing in the current edition of Thinking About the Future, summarizes the problems he says are combining to strangle North American economic society.

Another will go to Prime Minister Trudeau, because with few exception, the arguments are as applicable in Canada as they are in the U.S. Only the figures differ.

SINCE June, Calvert has faced three audiences with his treatment of the subject — the Canadian Association for Pension Investment, which representing $12 billion in retirement funds, the Financial Executives Institute and the Rotary Club of Victoria. All received it with enthusiasm, he says.

When Calvert writes he distills the leading statistics and expert opinions of key figures and organizations in North America and in other parts of the world. His years in the business of projecting and predicting have brought him into contact with professors of economics, consulting actuaries, businessmen and research institutions.

It is not uncommon for Calvert to spend months researching, writing and editing a single presentation.

He says inflation has 12 faces none of which should be taken more seriously than another — all must be dealt with.

They are: the control of money supply.

Government spending.

The bureaucracy explosion.

Transfer payments — social benefits provided through taxes.

The cost-price index.

Rising taxes.

Imbalance of payments in foreign trade.

Labor negotiations.

Other employment costs, like symbolic salaries paid to top executives who ought to set an example by holding the line.

Energy and resource depletion.

Imported inflation, as when coffee prices skyrocket.

Expectations — the anticipation of continued inflation.

Calvert said the latter is a most insidious and perilous factor:

"One of the greatest dangers today is the tendency to accept inflation as one of the constant factors in our economy," he warns.

Calvert says public opposition to this fallacy is needed to arouse legislators, who in turn will concentrate the problem where it belongs — in the federal cabinet.

The government already must take most responsibility for the extent of inflation.

FOR example, if Canada's economy is a reflection of the American scene and the U.S. national deficit amounts to $60 billion, the Canadian deficit should be viewed on a one-tenth scale, to arrive at $6 billion.

Instead it is $11 billion, Calvert said.

"No wonder Canada's got roaring inflation — there's a source right there."

In addition, the Canadian money supply has been allowed to increase far beyond the natural growth of our Gross National Product, which has been 3 to 4 per cent a year, or about one-third the rate of money growth, Calvert said.

This also has the effect of devaluing and weakening the dollar in foreign exchange, which in turn hikes inflation.

Errors Charged To Newhouse

Errors riddle a professional assessment of the Oak Bay fire department, a firefighters' spokesman told municipal council Monday.

Oak Bay Firefighters' Association Local 1856 made the claim in an hour-long response to a management consultant's report which last month recommended the force be cut by four men.

Erskine said 750 hours went into the examination of the G.H. Newhouse and Associates Ltd. study.

Erskine said the Newhouse report used incorrect assumptions, quoted authorities that were not consulted and referred to false statistics.

Mayor Brian Smith also was handed a petition in support of firefighters signed by 4,460 Oak Bay residents.

The brief and petition were referred to council's fire committee for study.

Erskine said the Newhouse report was an unwarranted aftershock of Proposition 13 in California.

"The people of the community have not complained about the cost of fire protection but the politicians are saying the degree of fire protection is not warranted and the costs are excessive."

The report asked whether citizens would notice an appreciable reduction in taxes with a reduced firefighting force, the four-man reduction equivalent to a saving of $4.28 per head of population.

If fire crews are reduced it will mean the attending officer will be actively involved in fighting the fire rather than leadership and direction of the crew, raising the chances for accident, the report concluded.

Nearly 80 per cent of fires in North America are in single and double family dwellings, Erskine said, adding: "Your municipality is full of them."

Erskine said it is not necessary to have manufacturing industries, wharves and oil storage tanks to be concerned about fire losses.

SIDNEY LOOKS AT PARKING

Sidney council Monday approved a study of off-street parking.

The study will dertermine if the present parking bylaw specifying one parking space for every four restaurant seats and one space for every 400 square feet of sales area is adequate.

The study won't start for five months and is expected to be completed by the end of July next year. Aldermen didn't want the study started until the community plan is completed.

Tourist Business Averted Downturn After Thanksgiving

Victoria's banner tourist season carried strongly through October, avoiding the traditional Thanksgiving Day downturn for the first time in a decade.

Restaurant and bar receipts were about 20 per cent higher than last October and hotel occupancy rates were reported as high as 87 per cent.

Good weather and a bonus of about 15 per cent on the American dollar were two major factors, along with strong promotional activities by the provincial department of travel.

Retail trade and the sawmill industry also did well during October, according to a survey by the Canada Employment Centre.

Merchants reported October receipts were much better than last October.

Building supply firms also reported a brisk month, especially for insulation materials and paint.

The continuing strength in the economy created 800 jobs at the local Canada Employment Centre, up 250 from the same month last year.

However, the supply of jobs continues to be much lower than the numbers of people seeking them, local CEC assistant manager Doug Yearwood said.

Victoria is getting an influx of workers from northern B.C. and the Prairies who are fleeing the cold weather and hoping to find work here.

"There is really nothing for them. The economy is fairly strong but not many new jobs are opening up."

Christmas hiring has almost been completed. Department stores in the Victoria area have already lined up most of the people they will need and the post office has stopped accepting applicants for Yule delivery help. There are 2,000 applications on file and not more than 300 will be hired.

While there is no strong growth here, the economy should continue to be stable over the winter, Yearwood said.

Employment will continue to be at a high level in the forest products industry because of strong lumber markets and there is a rush on in the bush to produce enough logs before snow season.

There are signs the tourist season will continue to be fairly strong right through until Christmas.

Provincial government hiring is steady at about 25 Victoria jobs a week, but all on a replacement basis. There is no growth evident in the civil service.

In fact there may be a few layoffs in the federal civil service here as a result of a cutback ordered by Ottawa.

Convicts Reject Prison Switch

By DEREK SIDENIUS
Times Staff

Most American prisoners in Canadian jails and Canadians in U.S. jails have opted to remain where they are rather than be repatriated to complete their sentences under an international prisoner exchange treaty.

Jack Stewart, a spokesman for the Canadian Penitentiary Service in Vancouver, said in an interview today only seven of 35 Americans in B.C. jails have so far taken part in the program.

The seven were transferred to the penitentiary in Kingston in mid-October. From there they were taken to Chicago, the main collection point for U.S. prisoners.

The seven included five inmates from the B.C. Penitentiary in New Westminster and one each from Matsqui and Mountain in the Fraser Valley.

One prisoner was serving 39 years for robbery and wounding and had a release date of 2010 while another was serving life for murder.

Two other prisoners were serving seven and 20-year terms for narcotic offences.

One prisoner was doing nine years for robbery and attempted murder, another 20 years for a variety of offences while the seventh was serving five years for robbery.

Stewart said 29 Canadians out of nearly 90 in U.S. jails decided to return to Canada to serve out the remainder of their sentences.

None have yet arrived in B.C.

All of the Canadians came from federal U.S. prisons and state prisons in Texas, one of only two states that have ratified the international treaty to date.

Sting Ads Stung Grace

Viewers who were driven almost to distraction by Sunday night's saturation of the movie The Sting by Western Express ads will be glad that Provincial Secretary Grace McCarthy plans to find out howcum.

The ads were repeated ad nauseam during every commercial break. It got so viewers were recognizing Western winners almost as old friends.

A number of people moaned about the ads to McCarthy and she says she plans to find out how much it cost the Western to run them and why the same plugs were pushed over and over again.

"There was no room at the hotel for a socialist."

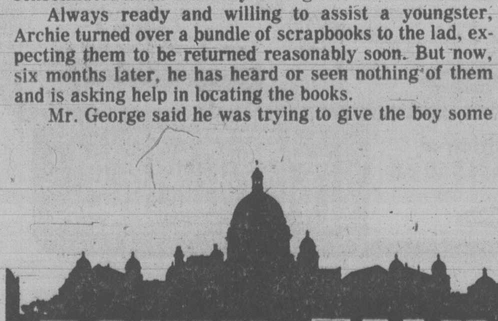
With no comparisons intended, Larry Tickner of 589 Nora Place says that was the situation last week when he tried to get into the Socialist International Congress in Vancouver as the official representative for the Socialist Party of Canada.

He said he was refused permission to speak to the congress, escorted out of the hotel and reduced to handing out leaflets in front of the Hyatt Regency hotel where the three-day congress was held.

He said security at the hotel was heavy but in his case "I wouldn't call it security, I would call it censorship."

Tickner said far from being a socialists' conference in the true meaning of the word, it was a rich-man's meeting complete with limousines dropping delegates off at the hotel.

"I bet if Karl Marx had somehow come alive, he wouldn't have been allowed in either."



Last May Victoria's best-known swimming coach loaned a 50-year collection of photos and newspaper clippings to a young man, about 18, who needed help writing a school paper.

Archie McKinnon was doing a favor for a man named George, whose first name he does not know, and of whom he had not heard since the two of them were schoolmates more than 40 years ago.

Always ready and willing to assist a youngster, Archie turned over a bundle of scrapbooks to the lad, expecting them to be returned reasonably soon. But now, six months later, he has heard or seen nothing of them and is asking help in locating the books.

Mr. George said he was trying to give the boy some help in writing a paper about a noted athlete and Archie agreed to tell about his long career teaching at the YMCA and coaching national and Olympic swimmers. The scrapbooks, besides containing much local history, covered many athletic achievements of the last half-century, including the Juan de Fuca Strait swim era when McKinnon coached Marilyn Bell.

The now-retired swim coach neglected to get the boy's name and all efforts to trace George — no relation to ex-mayor Percy George — have failed.

The conviction of her co-workers that Diane Byrne wouldn't stay off work without phoning in to the Registrar of Companies at 940 Blanshard recently led to the rescue of her and six other workers in the new provincial government building at 940 Blanshard.

They became concerned when she didn't show up for work and started a search. They discovered other departments had personnel missing. Somebody remembered hearing the elevator alarm earlier in the morning.

The searchers, unable to find a key, pried open the door of one elevator on the ground floor to find Byrne and the others stuck just below ground level.

They had been there since 8:15 a.m. — almost two hours — after ringing the alarm when the elevator, going to the second floor, began to float backwards.

The alarm was one of those that had been turned off for maintenance work.

This, in itself, was a bit of a paradox. It wasn't too long ago workers in the new building were complaining about the cold.

But they are not trying to find out which powder with Ingredient X washes whitest.

The exercise is a community survey undertaken by Saanich planning department as part of its community planning process.

Citizen input is the name of the game. Residents will be asked their opinions on such things as development in Saanich, housing types and neighborhood facilities.

Survey organizer Carey Phemister says the interviewers will be calling at about 2,700 households or 10 per cent of the Saanich total over the next five weeks or so. The completed questionnaires will then receive computer analysis.

Testing, Testing Only, Only - Cass

Saanich Ald. Ian Cass was recently seen driving a farm tractor on property at Panama Flats where the Vantreight family is engaged in potato farming — and embroiled in a hassle with Saanich over trespass on municipal land.

But Cass says he was not working for Ald. Geoff Vantreight or his sons, and definitely not party to any violation of municipal bylaws.

Cass, who had a tractor equipment company before he entered local politics, said his council colleague wanted him to pass an opinion on a new tractor Vantreight was considering buying.

"I went over there and tried it out. I must have been there at least half an hour," Cass told Town Talk.

Send Your Toys To Prisoners

All that's needed is some toys.

The John Howard Society will accept contributions and place barrels in the Hillside and Mayfair shopping malls this weekend.
